Warnings Up As Hurricane Heads Back For Florida

South Georgia Also In Path of Disturbance From Gulf.

Streets Flooded In the Everglades

Little Damage Reported From First Blow of Tropical Storm.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 29.—Moving rapidly northward through the Gulf of Mexico, a blustering tropical storm with two deaths charged against it neared the extreme western coast of Florida tonight.

The Weather Bureau said winds of hurricane force probably prevailed near the center of the disturbance and warned it may pass inland before morning near or a short distance west of Apalachicola.

Apalachicola, a city of some 4,000 inhabitants, is suituated at the mouth of the river by that name, about 200 miles west of Jacksonville.

Two Lives Are Lost.

Although the disturbance lacked hurricane force in its passage across the extreme southern tip of Florida last night, preparations for its passage were credited with loss of two lives.

A lineman was burned to death by live wires and a deckhand was lost from an overturned boat in the Miami area.

Effects of the blow were felt in St. Petersburg, Tampa and other west-coast cities while the storm center moved offshore in the Gulf. St. Petersburg reported estimated wind velocity of 50 miles an hour.

Twenty miles eastward, across the bay, Tampa experienced a 35-mile wind. The winds dropped steadily as the disturbance progressed northward. In the Tampa-St. Petersburg area all danger had passed.

The Weather Bureau estimated the storm will reach the Apalachicola section about 3 a. m.

Senior Meteorologist Grady Norton, of the Federal hurricane reporting service, said that, if the storm continued its present path it will affect the entire area between Madison and Marianna, Fla., which are about 100 miles apart.

Velocities near the center, said Norton, probably will reach 75 miles an hour, hurricane force, on the coast, but will diminish as the storm blows overland.

The storm was over the Gulf all day with little damage so far reported along its course.

Northward Route.

The Weather Bureau said that the storm, after reaching land again, probably would move northward a short distance into south Georgia and then recurve northeastward, striking the Atlantic Ocean again off the Carolinas.

The weather men said a storm moving 12 to 14 miles an hour, as this one is doing, ordinarily does not increase its force or change its direction rapidly.

The streets in Everglades, far down on the west coast, were flooded this morning when the storm center passed into the Gulf south of there.

No other casualties and no great property damage were caused last night.

Woman Learning To Drive Falls Dead

For the past two decades Miss Emma E. McKnitt, an employe of the War Department, has wanted to drive an automobile.

When she became 55 years old she decided to learn how to operate a car, and then buy one. She told this to her friends in the house where she had her room at 19 Channing street northeast.

Yesterday a man came with an automobile to give her the first lesson. There would be no more commuting on trams and buses.

It was thrilling as she sat at the wheel and the car moved magically along Bates street northeast, near Eighteenth street.

But just as the mysteries of her new world were being explained to her, Miss McKnitt collapsed. She died a few minutes later.

Alberta Prints 'Boom Dollar' To Help Relief

Province Will Use Money Raised in Stamp Sales to Spread Revival.

By the United Press.

Calgary, Alberta, July 29.—A year after he was swept into office on a pledge to bring social credit to Alberta, Prime Minister William Aberhart began tonight to print "velocity dollars," which he hopes will be the magic keys to prosperity.

Distribution of the dollars—a modified form of scrip used in some American communities during the depression—will begin Saturday.

This is the way the "velocity dollar" works:

The provincial government prints certificates and passes them out free of charge to anybody who wants them. An arbitrary value of $1 is placed on each certificate. With the certificates are printed special 2-cent stamps.

2-Cent Stamp.

If the original owner of the certificate holds it for longer than a week he must buy a 2-cent stamp and paste onto it. Each succeeding week the holder of the certificate must affix a 2-cent stamp. That goes on until the government has sold $1 worth of stamps for each certificate.

When all the blank spaces on the certificate are filled with stamps the holder of the certificate at that time takes it to the government and exchanges it for a dollar.

There is nothing compulsory about the plan. No one is compelled to accept a certificate and no merchant is required to take one in payment for goods. Aberhart believes, however, that any merchant who refuses to accept them will suffer a disastrous loss in business.

British and American firms operating in the province will be asked to accept the "velocity dollars" and then redeem them from the government.

Trust Fund.

The money the government makes on stamps will be placed in a trust fund to be used to finance public works.

Wage earners will be asked to accept part of their salaries in the scrip. Cabinet members will set them an example by doing likewise. In fact, the redemption fund will be started by cash supplied by cabinet members from their salaries.

The redemption fund will be swelled by diverting to it relief funds which customarily go to towns in the province.

Supporters of the plan admit there is one grave danger to its success. That is shortly after the "velocity dollars" are put into circulation great numbers of people will come in to redeem them. That would strain the redemption fund.

If the plan does work, Aberhart's supporters say "we will have social credit before we know it."

Quoddy Plan Hinted 'Alive' By Roosevelt

President Tells Neighbors in Maine 'We Are to Have' Tide Project.

By the Associated Press.

Campobello Island, N. B., July 29. President Roosevelt told Campobello and Eastport neighbors late today that "we are going to have Quoddy."

From the front porch of his summer cottage, the vacationing Chief Executive spoke to 150 persons invited to an informal reception on the Roosevelt lawn.

"Quoddy will be completed," he said. "I believe in Quoddy and I believe you do, too."

Nearly 100 guests were at the picnic along with the President's wife and mother, and Allison Dysart and J. B. McNair, premier and attorney general, respectively, of New Brunswick.

Col. Kenyon Joyce, of Fort Myer, Va., arrived during the day to act as the President's military aid on his Canadian trip.

Prepares to Leave.

By the United Press.

Campobello Island, New Brunswick, July 29.—President Roosevelt tonight bade adieu to his neighbors here and prepared for departure tomorrow for Quebec.

In the Canadian City on Friday he will discuss with Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of the Dominion, and Premier Mackenzie King, hyroelectric power development as it affects the United States and Canada.

With a big boulder serving as a backrest and the seat cushion of an automobile as his chair, the Nation's Chief Executive sat on the beach here today at a picnic party and revealed to newspapermen that the St. Lawrence project would be one of the subjects of conversation.

At the same time he vigorously defended the Quoddy tide harnessing project at nearby Eastport, Me., as an interesting experiment that might well serve as a laboratory in the event Canada and the United States ever decided on joint action in the development of the full hydroelectric resources in this vicinity.

Consumption Gains.

He pointed out that power consumption in both countries steadily was increasing and that if scientists perfect a cheap transmission system, power generated here could easily be distributed to New England industrial centers.

Mr. Roosevelt, in gray suit and blue sweater, and burned a deep brown by the sun as the result of his two weeks of seagoing on the yacht Sewanna, also revealed that when he returns from Canada he would confer on flood-control problems with the Governors of Vermont, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

He will leave his special train near the Winooski Dam in Vermont August 1, and go by automobile to Montpelier where the Vermont executive and his engineers will be waiting to lay be-

Landon Hailed By Ballantine On Labor View

Former Treasury Under-Secretary Says Stand Is Courageous.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—Arthur A. Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, said today Gov. Alf M. Landon's stand on labor in his acceptance speech "showed not only his humanity, but his courage."

"In his declaration," Ballantine said in a speech at the Women's National Republican Club, "he expressed an unqualified belief in the right of employes to organize for the improvement of working conditions, wages and hours, and recognized the betterment that had resulted from such self-organization.

"Equality Before Law."

"At the same time he declared that in the absence of union contract 'an employe has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union,' free from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person.

"Of course Gov. Landon could foresee that any declaration of equality of employe and employer alike under the ban upon coercion would meet criticism. Yet the certainty of criticism did not lead him into silence or evasion.

"He believes that equality before the law is a living doctrine in the interest of the American people as a whole, and making for the permanent interest of labor, and is willing to say so.

"Practically applied, that is not a declaration for the company union. It is a declaration for the right of unimpeded self-determination by employes of their relations and affiliations."

G. O. P. Claims 2 States.

Topeka, Kans., July 29 (AP).—Forecasts that the November election would align populous New York and Ohio for Gov. Alf M. Landon were left with the Presidential candidate today by three visiting Republicans.

Col. William J. Donovan and William M. Chadbourne, both of the Empire State, and Hulbert Taft, editor and publisher of the Cincinnati Times-Star, were luncheon guests of the Kansas Governor.

Donovan, who left Buffalo to become Assistant Attorney General under President Hoover and was Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's Republican opponent in 1932, told newsmen:

"I believe there will be enough strength up-State and enough defection in New York City to give New York to Landon."

Taft, a cousin of Charles P. Taft, of Landon's campaign staff, said "Ohio, in a close election, will be for Gov. Landon."

"It wouldn't surprise me if the

By the United Press.

Mexico City, July 29.—Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, and his daughter were among several American tourists held up yesterday along the Pan-American Highway near Taxco, Hidalgo State, and robbed of nearly all their money.

Senator Reynolds, who recently announced his intention of being the first United States Senator to drive his own automobile over the new road, inaugurated July 1, reportedly was forced to borrow funds from a New York broker to continue his trip to Acapulco, on the Pacific Coast. The broker had succeeded in hiding some of his money from the robbers.

The war department, indignant over the first robbery reported since the official opening of the highway, ordered Gen. Alselmo Macias, military commander of the zone, to dispatch soldiers immediately to attempt to capture the bandits.

The foreign office expressed "great regret" over the holdups and promised that military authorities would take energetic measures to punish the bandits.

Albino Trout, Denied Air Ride, Just Swim Around the Globe

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Yesterday was "one of those days" so far as Fred G. Orsinger, director of the Bureau of Fisheries' aquarium, and a bunch of albino trout were concerned. First the fish were going for a plane ride. Then they weren't. Then they were. Then they——

But when things reached that stage Orsinger clasped his aching head in trembling hands and the fish went to the bottom of their tank to mope.

Finally the whole story came out. For more than a week the aquarium director had counted on sending eight of the pink-eyed, platinum blonde fish through the air to the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas. All arrangements had been made with the American Airlines to carry the specially constructed tank. Dallas dignitaries, including the mayor and aquarium director, were to meet the plane.

Orsinger's workmen, with Orsinger adding a few expert touches built the tank, complete to insulation, air pump, ice container and thermometer, and then enclosed the whole contraption in a fancy octagonal wooden box. The total weight was about 160 pounds.

American Airlines said it was too heavy. That was Tuesday night. The fish seemed discouraged but Orsinger was disheartened for only

Sen. Donahey Hurt as Bolt Strikes Boat

Senator Vic Donahey, of Ohio, was stunned and burned late yesterday when lightning struck the power launch on which he was fishing near Solomons Island, Md., close by the mouth of the Patuxent River.

The bolt knocked the Senator down. He was unconscious for several minutes, and was revived just as the disabled boat, the Catfish, reached port through the choppy waters.

Donahey was treated by a visiting physician in the fishing colony and then helped aboard his own craft, where he was put to bed. He was reported resting comfortably late last night, although the burns on both hands, which were bathed in alcohol, were causing him considerable discomfort.

"I feel numb; I want to lie down," the Senator said when he was taken from the craft.

Couple Also Aboard.

Aboard the Catfish, which was in commnad of Capt. William Hayden, veteran Chesapeake Bay skipper, were G. A. Schlesinger, former director of highways in Ohio, and his wife.

Other guests included Mrs. Leiola Leeth, the Senator's secretary, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wallsmith and their daughter, Constance. A colored deckhand waited on the party.

Capt. Hayden was burned slightly as he stood at the helm of the craft when the lightning struck. The bolt split the mast of the craft as she was making for port in an effort to beat the storm.

The Senator had been at Solomon's Island for the past month. When he is vacationing there, he lives aboard his own yacht, the Ohio, which stands by in the harbor, but he fishes from the craft operated by Capt. Hayden.

"We'd been out in the bay about two hours when I saw the storm gathering and turned toward port," said Capt. Hayden.

"We were about half way back, I guess, when the sky seemed to split wide open, and there was fire and a deafening crash."

Craft Races to Port.

Mrs. Donahey, wife of the Senator, could not be reached at their apartment in the Broadmoor last night, and later it was learned she was visiting in Ohio. The legislator did not want her informed of the accident, lest she be alarmed.

After the bolt had ripped into the Catfish, Capt. Hayden, not knowing how serious the condition of the Senator might be, raced through the choppy waters against apparent death, putting full speed ahead in his dash for medical assistance.

"I don't want any fuss made about a little thing like this," was the Senator's last remark before he dropped off to sleep.

Donahey was elected to the Senate in 1934, winning in every Ohio county over his Republican opponent, the veteran Senator Simeon D. Fess.

He served as Governor of Ohio from 1923 until 1929, and was the only man ever to occupy the executive mansion in Columbus for three successive terms. He is 63, and the father of 10 children.

Two Boys Turn In 11 False Alarms; Get 330 Days Each

Judge Robert E. Mattingly yesterday sentenced two youths, Joseph M. Bresnahan, 17, of 3639 Warder street, and Harry L. Smith, 18, of 1511 Lawrence street northeast, to serve 330 days in jail for turning in 11 false alarms of fire.

This recalled the cases of Adam M. Wyant, jr., son of the late Representative from Pennsylvania, and Waldron W. Whitehead, two youths, who last winter were arrested and charged with turning in 29 false alarms, sending fire apparatus out over ice-covered streets.

On the official papers for Wyant and Whitehead, who pleaded guilty to seven charges, there was the notation, "Senator Davis interested." Judge Isaac Hitt took their personal bond and suspended payment of a small fine.

Another youth arrested with Bresnahan and Smith, Harry S. Mackey, 19, of 713 Shepherd street northwest, was given a suspended sentence when it was testified he had become frightened after the other boys had turned in the first alarm and had left them.

Ancient Metropolis Uncovered By Excavators in Louisiana City

Completion of excavation of one of the largest cities east of the Mississippi at the time of Columbus' first voyage was reported yesterday by the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution.

This was the "capital of the kingdom of Anilco," discovered buried under the town of Troyville, La.

The city, which was discovered by Hernando de Soto in 1542, was described thus by one of his companions:

"It is on the banks of a river wider than the Guadalquiver and has about 400 good houses, with a beautiful square in the middle. The dwelling of the cacique (lord) is upon an eminence which commands the town. The lord was, at the arrival of the troops, in front of this place at the head of a battalion of 1,500 men, the elite of his subjects."

In the centuries that followed the city was reduced to a great mound, which itself began to disappear. Four years ago highway engineers discovered it as they began operations near Troyville.

They discovered foundations of the "palace," and turned their discovery over to the Bureau of American Ethnology. Winslow M. Walker, at that time a member of the staff, began digging.

Walker wasn't at work long until he made an even greater find. The City of Anilco of the sixteenth

Rebels Circle Madrid, Mass 40,000 in Hills For Immediate Attack

Hundreds Killed In Mountain Fight

Loyalist Reinforcements Bombarded En Route to Buitrago.

By the United Press.

With the Northern Rebel Armies in the Guadarrama Mountains, July 29.—Rebel forces in the north and south, pushing forward for simultaneous attacks on Madrid established contact with each other by airplane tonight, presaging a mass offensive against the capital and President Manuel Azana's Left Wing government.

Four bombing planes, captured by the rebels from the government forces, arrived from Seville, southern headquarters of the Fascist insurgents.

This means the northern and southern rebels will now be able to co-ordinate their movements and that the "big push" on the capital will begin immediately after the arrival of reinforcements at Seville from Spanish Morocco. The fresh troops were expected momentarily.

Hundreds Are Killed.

In the battle of the Guadarramas today hundreds of "reds" (loyalists) and "whites" (rebels), were killed and wounded.

The battle was indecisive and the two armies remained deadlocked at Buitrago, 40 miles north of Madrid, aerial bombardment was intense. Tons of bombs and grenades were dropped on the battling troops from loyalist and rebel planes.

The rebels have passed 40,000 troops in this sector. The number of loyalists is not known, although their army apparently is larger than Gen. Emilio Mola's.

During one attack, five loyalist airplanes bombed a bridge near Buitrago, wounding 30 rebels and killing one. Rebel aviators brought down two loyalist planes in the thick forests. One rebel machine was shot down, but its occupants escaped despite machine-gun strafing.

Reinforcements Bombarded.

A squadron of rebel planes crossed the enemy's lines and bombarded loyalists reinforcements en route to Buitrago from Madrid.

Scores of wounded were taken from the front lines to improvised hospitals in army trucks, whose floors were padded with straw. The straw soon became saturated with blood.

Rebel artillery batteries were screened by branches of trees, making it difficult for loyalist aviators to spot them.

Small fires tonight dotted the Guadarramas on the loyalist side. The army was believed at least two miles from the fires, built to draw rebel machine gun fire and bombs.

Purge of Enemies Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 29.—The Republic tonight ordered a merciless purge of enemies within its government and Leftists guardedly admitted the rebels might be able to wage a lengthened siege.

Army officers, officials and even women of prominence suspected of Fascist activity were among those arrested.

Work of seizing educational institutions of Catholic churches was hastened.

There were the usual conflicting claims of victory in battles both on northern and southern fronts.

The government still held the territory east from Madrid to the seacoast. Rebels retained Seville, Cordoba and Malaga to the south, and Valladolid, Segovia and Zaragoza on the north. San Sebastian and Santander were in Loyalist hands.

But on all these fronts battles impended.

Radio reports from Seville announced that Gen. Francisco Franco, revolutionary commander in chief, had reached there from Morocco.

A Loyalist submarine, with a crew of 40, was reported sunk by rebel bombs in a morning battle off Gibraltar. Another U-boat was believed crippled in a second engagement. A third of the Loyalist flotilla escaped.

Twelve rebel airmen were shot down in their planes.

Lassoes End Freedom of Wild Ponies

By Edward T. Folliard,
A Staff Correspondent.

Chincoteague Island, Va., July 29.—The wild ponies of Chincoteague, descended from the mustangs of Spanish conquistadores, were rounded up again today.

There were 300 of them, shaggy-maned roans, bays, pintos and piebalds. They made a grand spectacle—the fulfillment of a small boy's dream.

Watching the colts made many an onlooker feel sad.

Tomorrow, most of these youngsters will be sold at auction, and then will come the parting—a last nose-rub with mamma and a farewell to the cool marsh grass of Chincoteague Island. A stable and strange fodder will lie ahead.

Spanish Galleon Wrecked.

They will get more than just a pony for their money, these new owners. With the pony will go an aura of romance and a pretty legend.

The legend explains how it is that a herd of wild ponies should be on this remote Virginia island. Three centuries ago, according to the legend, a Spanish galleon with a cargo of ponies was wrecked off Chincoteague Island. The ponies swam ashore. Here they found the marsh grass to their liking, thrived and multiplied.

They were the same kind of Spanish ponies Cortez took into Mexico and which paralyzed with fright the first Aztecs who blocked his road to Montezuma's gold.

Gas Levy Leads Increase; Collections for the Year Are $35,603,330.

An increase of $1,258,320.13 in District tax collections for the fiscal year ended June 30 was reported yesterday by Tax Collector Chatham M. Towers to the Commissioners as the special tax committee prepared to resume its study of possible new sources of revenue.

The report, which showed total collections for the year to be $35,603,330.72, indicated that the failure of District revenue to meet anticipated expenditures cannot be traced to any slump in returns on present levies.

Confronted with an anticipated deficit of $960,365 for the current fiscal year, the special committee of District officials, headed by Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, will resume its study of possible new sources of revenue today.

Collection increases over the fiscal year 1935 are attributable chiefly to gains in amounts obtained from levies on personal property, alcoholic beverages, gasoline and insurance.

Real estate and motor vehicles fell below the previous year in their returns.

The 2-cent tax on gasoline made the largest advance, gaining $294,866.36, to reach $2,345,986.87. Alcoholic beverages yielded $161,747.94 more than in 1935 for a total of $1,073,404.25.

Personal property tax collections, always the most difficult, disclosed an encouraging trend by increasing $62,451.11 on tangibles to $1,014,134.48 and $94,866.77 on intangibles to $2,147,667.13. Returns this month are running far below those of last year, however, according to the tax assessor's office.

Real estate tax collections fell $241,796.07 below 1935 but still amounted to $18,075,230.57, or more than half of the total year's revenue.

Water fund collections, including rents, amounted to $1,825,960.13.

Couzens Denies Roosevelt Veers To Bankruptcy

Balanced Budget During Slump Impossible, Says Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 29.—Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, told an audience today he did not believe President Roosevelt would "bankrupt the Nation," and that no one could have balanced the Federal budget during the depressoin years.

Although Senator Couzens seeks renomination in the September primary, he said he would not compete with former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, his opponent for the Republican nomination.

"I will be entirely contented if the people of Michigan say I am through—too old to continue," he said. "I like to work, but if the people are dissatisfied with my work, I will be content to step aside."

Slump Not Monetary.

Senator Couzens devoted most of his time to answering questions.

"The country is still confronted by depression," he said, "but it is not now a monetary depression. What we are faced with is chaos and disturbance due to ignorance of the direction we are going."

Asked if he thought "Roosevelt will bankrupt the Nation," Couzens replied:

"Certainly I do not. In 1929 and succeeding years, many States and municipalities bankrupted themselves trying to prevent suffering among their unemployed. Somebody with unlimited taxing power, as the Federal Government, had to step in and take the load.

"I have been disgusted with this constant talk about balancing the Federal budget. How could anybody have balanced it? How could States have balanced their budgets if the Federal Government had not given them 70 cents for every 30 cents they spent on unemployment relief?"

Scouts "Red" Influence.

To a question "How soon do you expect a 'Red' Government in Washington to deliver us into the hands of Moscow?" the Senator replied:

"In the 14 years I have been in Washington I have learned there is no possibility, no intimation, no suggestion that our Government is a 'Red' Government. I do not know of a single member of Congress who wants to adopt a Moscow-type of government.

"All three functions of our Government—the legislative, executive and judicial—are functioning. Even though somebody might start a 'Red' movement, he could not get far."

Republicans carried New York State by 500,000," Chadbourne added.

He is treasurer of the New York County Republican Committee, managed the fusion ticket campaign which elected Mayor Fiorella A. LaGuardia in New York City, and said he supported the Theodore Roosevelt Progressive ticket in 1912. Landon, Chadbourne said, is "a practical, intelligent liberal."

Pinchot Backs Landon.

These expressions followed the statement of Gifford Pinchot, former Governor of Pennsylvania, last night, that he would support Gov. Landon, whom he called "a practical progressive." He supported Roosevelt in 1932. Pinchot said Landon has "the habit of doing things."

The Republican candidate plans a late August Eastern campaign swing with speeches at West Middlesex, Pa., and Chautauqua and Buffalo, N. Y. Donovan was asked what subject he thought the people in Buffalo would like to hear the nominee discuss.

"The great test in this campaign is unemployment," he replied. "Through the Buffalo section people are interested in jobs—that's what Roosevelt promised them."

"Landon's appeal," Donovan continued, "is the impression he gives the ordinary fellow of being a decent, unpretentious sort of citizen with a sincere sense of duty."

In reply to a question, Donovan, who was a colonel in the Rainbow Division, said there "seems to be a revival of enthusiasm among the veterans."

Both Candidates Veterans.

"For the first time since the war," he added, "both the candidates—Landon and Knox—have service records."

Taft said "the Union or Lemke third party, as conditions now stand, will poll a surprising vote in Ohio, and four out of five of these votes will be cast by individuals who otherwise would vote for Roosevelt."

Describing Landon as "the type of man we need for President at this time," Chadbourne said "the Republican Party in New York State is more united than in a great many years, while the Democratic Party is torn into factions."

New Federal Fund Grant Experiment Requires All Labor Be Drawn From Relief Rolls.

By Franklyn Waltman

WITHOUT any fanfare or detailed announcement, President Roosevelt has launched an interesting and, perhaps, significant experiment in the field of Federal relief. It came to light with the announcement of allocations for $22,700,000 of PWA funds out of the appropriation authorized by the last session of Congress.

WALTMAN.

This sum represented outright Federal grants to counties and municipalities for useful and needed public works projects on a matching basis. The Federal Government's share of the cost of these projects is 45 per cent. The municipality or county must provide the other 55 per cent out of its own funds.

The significant thing about these allocations, however, is that they were made only to communities having available on relief rolls all the labor—skilled and unskilled—needed to carry out the project. So far a requirement for 100 per cent relief-roll labor on these projects has not been written into contracts—but it is assumed that it will be when the contracts are made. Such a requirement has not previously been laid down by PWA.

Adding to the significance of this development is the fact that it was done at the specific direction of the President. Indeed, so far he has approved allocations only to communities where there is available on relief rolls sufficient skilled, as well as common labor, to carry out the project. Before approving the allocations the President set up as the determining factor for disbursement of the PWA money a rule of "need for relief" and he insisted that he be furnished with information regarding the nature of the relief rolls in these various communities.

* * *

Even though this method for handling the new PWA fund was forced on the President by the necessity of bailing out the Federal relief situation—since the present WPA fund under Harry Hopkins is inadequate—nevertheless its effect is to shift back to the local communities a substantial part of the cost of relief. And the local communities are accepting the obligation—are anxious for the opportunity—because they are getting something worth while in return in the way of needed schoolhouses, sewers and water systems.

This plan constitutes a trial, on a small scale, of the very heart of the Republican proposal for the handling of Federal relief. As stated in the Republican platform the essence of that proposal calls for "Federal grants-in-aid to the States and Territories while the need exists, upon compliance with these conditions: (a) a fair proportion of the total relief burden to be provided from the revenues of States and local governments; (b) all engaged in relief administration to be selected on the basis of merit and fitness; (c) adequate provision to be made for the encouragement of those persons who are trying to become self-supporting."

President Roosevelt's latest policy meets this program, disregarding sub-section (b), in an admirable way. Apparently Mr. Roosevelt has reached the conclusion that there is considerable merit in the contention that unless steps are taken to get relief of the unemployed back in the local communities it will become a Frankenstein monster beyond all control. Or perhaps he wants to try out the Republican theory in order to demonstrate that it is unworkable.

* * *

It is possible that the new policy inaugurated by the President is subject to rigid limitations. One is that the Federal relief rolls consist chiefly of unskilled or common labor. Skilled labor forms a comparatively small proportion of those on relief for several reasons. One is that with the pickup in economic activity the skilled artisan in many cases has a chance to get a job. Another is that skilled laborers are not the type to go on relief rolls until absolutely necessary.

Thus, in many communities there may not be on relief rolls sufficient skilled labor to carry out the type of projects which meet other requirements of PWA and for which the local communities are willing to put up 55 per cent of the cost. Few local communities are willing to tax their people for the useless type of projects which can be carried out solely with common labor.

But the President, it is understood, does not propose to limit PWA allocations under his new plan to those communities where 100 per cent of the needed skilled labor is available on relief rolls. The first allotments approved were but a beginning of his plan. He proposes to work downward. When approval has been given to allotments to all communities desiring them and able to supply 100 per cent relief roll labor, he is expected to move into a second category, approving projects where 100 per cent common labor and, say, 90 to 100 per cent skilled labor is available on relief rolls.

He then is expected to move on to a third category where 80 to 90 per cent skilled labor is available on relief rolls, and so on. In these latter categories, of course, it would be permissible to employ a small proportion of skilled workers not on relief, after those on the rolls were given employment—thus removing them from the full support of the Federal Government.

In this manner the President is persuading the local communities to contribute to the support of those who otherwise would be on relief. The plan works to the detriment of those communities with few skilled laborers on relief rolls. But after all, the primary purpose of PWA and the Federal relief program is not to contribute to the building of schools, sewers and water systems for local communities but to give assistance to those in need.

* * *

A serious defect in the plan, however, is that it may result in placing a premium on relief rolls—that is, tempt local communities, in order to get the Federal grant-in-aid for local projects, to load up their relief rolls by soliciting skilled workers to go on them. A community that is told that it cannot have the Federal grant because insufficient skilled labor is available on its relief rolls might very well take steps to see that such an objection is quickly met—and instead of solving the relief problem the program may work to complicate it further.

Lee Makes Bid For Marland's Backing at Polls

Gassaway, Cowboy Legislator, Also Loses in Oklahoma Run-off Primary.

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, July 29.—Representative Josh Lee, a Congressional freshman who polled a 112,000 majority to defeat Gov. E. W. Marland for the Democratic senatorial nomination, bid for the supporters of his defeated opponent tonight as the Governor pledged himself to the "entire ticket."

"Remember a primary is just a test within a family," said Lee in a radio address as he sought to soothe the wounds left by a bitter primary campaign which saw seven WPA employes discharged for alleged "political activity."

He yielded to a schoolmaster, 29-year-old Lyle H. Boren in the Democratic run-off. Boren quit a WPA job to oppose Gassaway for the nomination.

Lee's Republican opponent, Herbert K. Hyde, prosecutor of the Urschel kidnapers, moved to open his campaign in Lee's home town of Norman, seat of the University of Oklahoma, where Lee was a public speaking instructor before his initial venture into politics two years ago.

Ferris to Back Lee.

Hyde and Lee will battle for the Senate seat of blind Senator Thomas P. Gore, veteran of 19 years in the Upper House, who lost in the first primary July 7.

Among the first from the Marland camp to congratulate Lee was Scott Ferris, for many years national committeeman from Oklahoma, and Marland appointee on the Oklahoma highway commission. After sending a telegram to Lee, Ferris said he would support the former public-speaking professor.

Howard B. Drake, Marland's manager, who conducted successful campaigns four years ago when the former oil man was elected to Congress and two years ago when Marland was elected Governor, said he planned to retire from politics.

A third school teacher, Will Rogers, charged by opponents four years ago with using the name of Oklahoma's cowboy-humorist to win votes, was renominated by Democrats for Congressman-at-large over Sam Houston, descendant of the Texas hero.

Democrats' Women Leader Calls Anti-New Dealers Reactionaries.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 29.—Sharp criticism of anti-New Deal Democrats emanated from Democratic headquarters today while Republican leaders criticised the Democratic reply to Gov. Alf M. Landon's acceptance speech.

Miss Mary W. Dewson, chairman of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, called the anti-New Dealers "disgruntled reactionaries" and said Sterling Edmunds, of St. Louis, one of the leaders, was a "chief opponent of child labor legislation in the United States."

Referring to the meeting called by Edmunds and former Senator James Reed of Missouri, to be held in Detroit August 7, Miss Dewson said:

"A conference of disgruntled reactionaries called by Mr. Edmunds will assure millions of votes of progressive women for President Roosevelt. Every woman who has worked for ratification of the child labor amendment has had to battle Mr. Edmunds or his agents. Mr. Edmunds has become to women's groups the symbol of obstruction to progressive legislation."

Two Women Recruits.

Miss Dewson announced that two women who had been active in Republican politics in the past had volunteered to campaign for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

They are Eva Sanderson Child, magazine writer and former wife of Richard Washburn Child, Ambassador to Italy during the Administrations of Harding and Coolidge, and Dr. Emily Hickman, professor of history at New Jersey College for Women.

Melvin C. Eaton, Republican State chairman of New York, issued a statement declaring the six Democratic Governors who spoke last night in reply to Gov. Landon's acceptance speech had failed to find any weaknesses in the Republican nominee's program.

Representative J. W. Martin, Republican campaign manager in the East, said:

"I wonder why Gov. Brann did not want to speak for the New Deal. One would naturally be curious to know why his name was withdrawn after he had been mentioned as one of the tentative speakers."

Democratic Chairman James A. Farley had no comment other than that "the speeches were all made by the Governors who were definitely selected to make them."

Arthur W. Mitchell, Negro Congressman from Chicago, conferred with Farley this afternoon on the organization of a Negro unit in the Democratic campaign set-up.

Mitchell told Farley there were 3,000,000 Negro voters in 23 States outside of the South and predicted 75 per cent of them would vote for President Roosevelt.

Says Landon to Win.

Among the visitors at Republican headquarters were Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, and Representative Frederick R. Lehlbach, of New Jersey.

Hastings, who has just finished a trip through several States, said earlier in the summer he had been concerned about New Deal sentiment in Pennsylvania, but he found a strong swing to Gov. Landon. He said the Republican outlook in Maryland and Delaware was "good."

Lehlbach said Landon would carry New Jersey by an "astonishing majority."

Republican leaders and close friends of Herbert Hoover expressed the belief today the former President would make at least two major addresses in the East in behalf of the Landon-Knox ticket, one in Maine and the other probably in Pennsylvania.

In all, they expect Mr. Hoover to deliver four or five speeches over the country in the closing weeks of the campaign.

fore him their program. Then he will motor back to Hanover, N. H., for a similar discussion with New Hampshire's Governor and other officials, after which he will proceed to Springfield, Mass., scene of a disastrous flood last spring.

There Gov. James M. Curley and a group of Massachusetts officials will be present for a conference. It was believed that the other two Governors might rejoin him at Springfield for the meeting with Curley.

Present plans call for the Presidential special to head for Hyde Park from Springfield. At Hyde Park Mr. Roosevelt will remain for a few days before returning to Washington to plan a trip late in the month to the flood areas of southern New York, northern and western Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Next Ten Days Hold Corn Fate, Says Wallace

Heavy Rains Can Salvage 600,000,000 Bushels, He Believes.

By Robert C. Albright.

With the wheat crop already drought-bitten to around the normal consumption level, and the prices of most farm products skyrocketing, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace yesterday committed the fate of the corn belt and its vast stock-feeding supplies to the next ten days of rain or parched weather.

Heavy mid-western rains in the crucial next ten days can salvage about 600,000,000 bushels of corn, providing nearly enough food for lean livestock herds, the Administration farm chieftain indicated. But continued sun blight, said Wallace, will cut the corn supply 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels below the 1934 drought level to a possible 55-year low.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics announced the sharpest rise in prices of farm products in any one month since August, 1934, boosting the farm price index up 15 per cent above the pre-war average. From Chicago came word that corn, hogs, potatoes and lard catapulted upward by the drought, were selling at new highs for the year, and wheat was within a fraction of the 1936 top reached two weeks ago.

Bank From Survey.

Wallace said, however, that the drought's immediate effect on food prices "are not nearly as great as the newspapers indicate," and he saw no reason "to expect bread prices to be any higher" because of the wheat losses.

Just returned from a survey of the drought area to report to the President and resume direction of the Administration's efforts to ameliorate the effects of the sustained beating heat, Wallace received newspapermen after a conference with the President's drought committee.

He turned from discussion of the drought long enough to announce that the AAA cotton pool of some 1,600,000 bales, organized in 1933, finally has been liquidated. The Treasury has $56,000,000 to show for the pool cotton on sale since January, he said, but declined to say whether the operation involved a net loss or a profit. The cotton pool liquidation still leaves the Government with 3,000,000 bales of 12-cent loan cotton in the hands of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Although the Cabinet's farm spokesman refused to speculate on the full extent of the drought, for fear, he said, of influencing the market, he said the farmers, in his opinion, are in a better position to withstand the blight then they were in 1934, and the drought picture generally appeared better than two years ago.

Four factors, he said, operate to help farmers cope with further corn damage if it should come—a good hay crop, a good quality oat crop, and smaller numbers of pigs and cattle to feed than they had in 1934.

The Secretary indicated, however, that the United States may have to go to foreign markets for supplementary supplies of both wheat and corn. From Canada it may be necessary to bring in some 40,000,000 bushels of hard spring wheat, compared with 30,000,000 bushels imported last year.

If the drought ravage continues, and the corn crop is cut 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 bushels below 1934, Wallace said this country may have to call on Argentina for additional supplies of corn, indicating it may be well to import some Argentine corn anyway as a precautionary measure. Argentina supplied 34,000,000 bushels of corn to this country after the 1934 drought, and has been viewing the present situation in readiness.

"Granary Plan."

Wallace disclosed that he is still considering the idea of an "ever normal granary plan" for storing up surpluses in bumper years as insurance against drought periods, but declared it to be a "matter for legislation."

He said he is not yet convinced that the drought-stricken West is "going beak to desert" despite the fact that three drought years have occurred in close proximity.

"I am keeping my mind open as to whether or not there may be some climatic trend," he told reporters.

As Administration officials allotted ten more days to the weather man to make or break the corn crop, northwestern Kansas was reported to have received relief from heavy all-night rains, that averaged 2 inches over the area. It was said that no amount of rain or favorable weather can restore the corn already damaged, but fields in some States may make a fair crop with sufficient moisture.

The corn crop is important primarily because of Western pig and cattle stocks dependent on it for food. If cattle are cut off from this food supply, the Government plans to step in and purchase the livestock for slaughter as it did in 1934. To date, no purchases have been made.

Wallace said he did not think it would be necessary under any circumstances to inaugurate another pig killing program, due to the still limited hog supply.

Ill-Fated Barge Leaking Badly, Inquirers Told

Boat Listing 20 Minutes Before It Sank, Killing 15, Says Engineer.

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 29.—The Material Service, ill-fated sand barge which foundered early today in Lake Michigan with a loss of 15 lives, was listing to port and taking on water rapidly 20 minutes before it sank, steamboat inspection officials were told tonight.

Joseph Weber, assistant engineer and one of seven survivors of a crew of 22, so testified before Capt. William Nicholas, inspector of boilers, and Capt. Edward J. Fitzgerald, inspector of hulls, as a Federal investigation of the tragedy was begun.

The low-lying motorship, loaded to capacity with 2,000 tons of sand, sank suddenly 2 miles offshore in a heavy sea. Most members of the crew were trapped in their bunks.

The sudden foundering of the vessel was so mysterious that Federal officials late today called the seven survivors before them for questioning. Only five were able to attend, two being confined to Marine Hospital. Weber was the only witness before adjournment until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

15 Are Drowned.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 29.—A wind squall sent a big sand barge to the bottom of Lake Michigan today with her captain and 14 for her crew.

The snub-nosed boat, Motor Shipment Material Service, lurched suddenly to port and sank like a stone in the darkness of early morning a mile off the South Chicago Lighthouse.

The craft went down in the choppy waves so fast there was no time to man the lifeboats. Most members of the crew were trapped asleep in bunks below decks.

Seven men survived the whirling vortex of the wreck after having been sucked down with the ship. They were rescued by Coast Guardsmen called from the lighthouse.

None of the missing bodies had been recovered tonight, despite a full day's patrol by Coast Guardsmen. It was decided to send divers into the craft—it lay in 25 feet of water—to hunt bodies there, but a northwest wind ruffled the water too much to try it today.

French Waiters Ban Tips.

Bordeaux, France, July 29 (AP).—Bordeaux waiters, deserting the city's cafes, paraded in the rain tonight. Signs carried a legend strange, if agreeable, to the seasoned traveler: "Suppression of the tip." The waiters, contending the tip is undignified, but that their wages should be raised, began their strike yesterday.

Jurors Indict D. C. Physician In Medical Case

Dr. Crichton Held Under Bond, Police Charge Illegal Operation.

The indictment was returned despite the appearance of the physician before the grand jury, where he waived immunity and asked to testify. He is now at liberty on a bond of $1,000.

Dr. Crichton lives in the 1800 block of H street northwest. The woman is said to have visited the physician last May. When the operation was performed she moved to a local hotel, from which she was transferred to Gallinger Hospital, police said. She recovered.

Others indicted yesterday were:

Leroy Burkley, Nathaniel Lewis, Zack Lewis and Richard Brody, joy riding; Benjamin Parker, Anna Miller, Daniel Johnson and Oscar J. Gilliam, grand larceny; James E. Robinson, John M. Tucker, James H. Wilson, George W. Kirksey, John S. Wilson and Allan Mercer, housebreaking and larceny.

Sylvia Robinson, receiving stolen property; Alexander Brown, Louise Chisley and Joseph Queen, robbery; John Harris and Willie Davis, assault with a dangerous weapon; Mary Rose Simpson, manslaughter; Paul Dolsey, jr., and Lemuel Norman Kaye, first-degree murder.

The only charge ignored by the grand jury was that involving George H. Malloy, who was being investigated in connection with a charge of housebreaking and larceny.

Navy Is Seeking Cause of Blast Aboard Vessel

Fatal Explosion Not Due to 'Any Personal Failure,' Officials Say.

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, July 29.—Naval authorities viewed a shattered citadel aboard the cruiser Marblehead today, seeking the cause of an explosion in a 6-inch gun which killed two men and injured nine others, three critically.

A Navy board of inquest and court of inquiry convened on the warship for a closed hearing. Naval authorities in Washington said the explosion was not due to "any personal failure."

The gun, its breech block rent by the blast yesterday, still pointed to firing position as the inquiry opened.

Members of the board of inquest included Lieut. Comdrs. H. J. Noble and J. G. Davis, of the Medical Corps, and Lieut. E. A. Thomas, of Dental Corps. Capt. C. W. McGruder headed the court of inquiry, which will submit a report to the Navy Department in Washington.

Men in the lower citadel said the explosion was just a "big flash."

John W. Overton, 18, of Jackson, Tenn., who suffered powder burns on his face, said it happened so quickly he didn't realize he was injured until he staggered out and felt pain about his eyes.

"I was facing the gun," he said. He saw Moranda knocked across the citadel to the other gun.

Marital Rift Ends For Polly Morans

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 29 (AP).—The marital bark of Actress Polly Moran and Martin Malone has sailed into quiet waters.

"They're leaving in a day or so for a long trip on Polly's boat," Patrick Cooney, their attorney, said. "There's not going to be a divorce."

Malone's preliminary hearing on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon was called today and continued until August 12. The charge was filed two weeks ago when police arrested him and said he had shoved an automatic pistol against Miss Moran's head.

The gun jammed.

Polly, hoarse from screaming, explained her husky husband came home "fighting mad" because someone called him "Mr. Polly Moran."

Today she said she had forgiven him.

"Marty's sorry," she said. "And he's a high class fellow, really. Besides, marriage is a serious thing. We're going to take a trip and forget the whole thing."

Convict Who Served Excessive Term Freed

Jefferson City, Mo., July 29 (AP).—John Pierce, 54, was freed from the State penitentiary today after serving 13 years of a life sentence for a crime that carries a maximum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment.

It took a jury only 10 minutes to sentence him to life for a second-degree burglary, February 1, 1923. He was released today when the State supreme court, acting on a habeas corpus, held:

"The maximum punishment * * * could not and cannot exceed 10 years' imprisonment in said penitentiary and that said judgment and sentence are void * * *."

Final Tribute Paid Memory Of Mgr. Kerby

Last rites were held yesterday for the man who is credited with organizing Catholic charity and welfare work, the Right Rev. William Joseph Kerby, 66, and his devoted eldest sister, Josephine Kerby, who followed him in death as she had followed him in life.

Illustrious members of the clergy, representatives of virtually all Catholic religious orders, the faculty of Catholic University and official charity organizations gathered with students and friends of the Kerby family in the crypt of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, on the university campus, for the double requiem mass.

The celebrant was Dr. William F. Russell, a member of the university's department of religion, and a nephew of the dead. Mgr. Kerby was professor of sociology at the university, chaplain of Trinity College and editor of the Ecclesiastic Review. He died Monday at his home, 3900 Connecticut avenue. Within 36 hours, his sister died. Both wil be buried tomorrow in Sioux City, Iowa.

There was no eulogy for the man who organized 26 years ago the National Conference of Catholic Charity and who inspired the founding of the National Catholic School of Social Service. Only the words and music of the formal requiem service echoed through the crypt, which was packed with more than 2,000 persons, although there are chairs for only 1,200.

Two Bishops Attend.

Those who filled the offices of the mass were: Deacon, the Rev. John J. Burke, C. S. P., general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; sub-deacon, Dr. Ignatius Smith, O. P., professor of philosophy at Catholic University, and master of ceremonies. Dr. Paul H. Furfey, of the department of sociology of the university.

Among the members of the clergy who attended the service were the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore; the Most Rev. George Leech, bishop of Harrisburg, Pa.; the Right Rev. Francis E. Hyland and the Right Rev. Aegidio Vagnozzi, from the Apostolic Delegation; the Right Rev. Joseph Corrigan, rector of Catholic University; the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector; the Right Rev. Patrick McKenna, of Philadelphia; the Right Rev. Edward L. Buckey, pastor of St. Matthew's Church; the Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, of Catholic University, and the Right Rev. Albert Smith, of Baltimore.

Approximately 1,000 sisters and priests were at the mass. A special delegation of students and Alumnae of Trinity College, where Mgr. Kerby had taught sociology for 20 years, was in the congregation.

Pallbearers for Mgr. Kerby were Dr. Richard J. Purcell, Prof. Louis H. Crook, Dr. Otto J. Ramler, J. Harvey Cain and Dr. Roy J. Deferrari.

Many at Bier.

The following men who had been associated with him during his 39 years on the faculty of Catholic University or in his charity work served as honorary pallbearers:

Pallbearers for Mgr. Kerby's 76-year-old sister were Dr. Martin R. Maguire, Dr. Frank O'Hara, Allen Pope, Charles Neil, Aubrey Fennell and Dick Murphy.

In the funeral procession were the survivors, the Misses Ora and Leo Kerby, of Washington, and Mrs. Agnes McHugh, of Chicago, sisters of the dead, and a niece, Ellen Russell Gillis, with her husband, Dr. Frederick J. Gillis, assistant superintendent of the Boston, Mass., schools.

Following the requiem mass, both bodies lay in state in Trinity College Chapel until the middle of the afternoon. Mgr. Kerby, in the robes of his rank, held his chalice as he lay in his casket.

Soon after his death, his relatives received a message of condolence from Pope Pius XI. Two years ago Mgr. Kerby was invested with the rank of Domestic Prelate to His Holiness.

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist.

Diary Reveals Astor Love Life, Spouse Asserts

Her Notes Quote Her as Enamored of 'George,' Husband Says.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 29.—Mary Astor confided in her diary that she was in love with another man three months before their divorce, her former husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, charged in an affidavit filed tonight in the court battle with the former actress over custody of their 4-year-old daughter. The other man was identified only as "George."

A few minutes later, a nurse testified that four different women had spent the night on various occasions with Dr. Thorpe and that she frequently had served breakfast to the physician and his women guests in his bedroom, adjoining that of the child.

Dr. Thorpe's affidavit was entered into Superior Court records in his efforts to retain custody of the daughter, Marylyn. Miss Astor began action by charging the physician threatened to publicly "scandalize" her if she contested the divorce, and Dr. Thorpe replied with the charge she was guilty of "gross immoral" conduct.

Charges Wife Drank.

Dr. Thorpe testified briefly, charging his wife was quarrelsome and drank. His affidavit said:

"On or about February 8, 1935, the defendant (Miss Astor) in her own statement in writing said:

"'I would wait a few months, let Franklyn think he had won by telling him that George and I were through—and in six months—a year maybe—bring it up again when he had no grounds for cross-complaint.

"'Marylyn's development is purely physical—love—rest—diet—exercise—discipline. All these things Franklyn can give her as well as I. Later on I can move to have the custody changed over to me. It would be very hard for him then to dig up an old affair against me!'"

The affidavit further stated:

"In ths connection affiant, Franklyn (Dr. Thorpe) alleges that one of the reasons defendant made no defense to the divorce proceedings was to save unfavorable publicity against the man who broke up the home of the parties hereto. Defendant on or about the eighth day of February, 1935, made the following statement in writing:

"'I love George and the least I can do is to save him from a messy scandal. Maybe I am being foolishly gallant, but maybe I also can do one nice thing in my life.

"'He (Dr. Thorpe) was very badly broken up for several days; used his final weapon with me. I need you. With tears.

Served Meals in Bedroom.

"'For the sake of peace and respite from all this emotionalism, I told him I would do nothing at present. My main reason for saying that is, quite honestly, I want to be able to see George for the rest of his stay here without being all upset. I want to have the last few times of completely enjoying him, then when he has left town I can start in again. I must go through with this.'"

Miss Nellie Richardson, formerly employed as a nurse for the child in Dr. Thorpe's Hollywood home, was the one who testified she frequently had served breakfast to the physician and his women guests in his bedroom.

She named the women she said had been overnight guests of Dr. Thorpe as Miss Norma Taylor, Miss Betty Graff, Mrs. Lillian Mills and Mrs. Madge Scofield.

Miss Taylor, she testified spent the night with the physician after an incident he related last night during which he had called police to eject her when he said she had attempted violence.

Pony Herd Rounded Up for Annual Chincoteague Island Auction

Native riders round up the wild ponies for ther swim froom Assateague Island to Chincoteague for the annual pony penning which precedes the auction sales. The round-up has been an annual event for 13 years.

Wild Ponies

Whatever the true account, the ponies have been here a mighty long time, and men who ought to know say they unquestionably have a Spanish strain in them.

The annual practice of rounding up the ponies and corralling them was begun before the American Revolution, according to local lore. Those who took part in the round-up were privileged to brand their share of ponies, and either keep them or sell them.

Down through the years the number of owners has dwindled until now the wild herd is owned by three men—Capt. Joe Truitt, oyster dealer; Clarence Beebe, poultry raiser, and J. T. Howel, who owns the local movie theater.

You can search the world over and not find men with a more favorable investment.

They have no feed bill. The ponies wouldn't recognize a bag of oats if they saw one. Their manger is a vast stretch of marsh grass that fringes Chincoteague and its neighboring island, Assateague. That grass, plus an occasional bite of myrtle leaves, is all the ponies eat, summer or winter.

Their Worries Are Nil.

Truitt, Beebe and Howel simply maintain a policy of laissez faire. They don't even have to bother with veterinarians during foaling seasen. The brood mares take care of themselves.

Today's roundup was begun at dawn.

The "cowboys" were weather-beaten islanders, who just today had abandoned the decks of their fishing boats for the saddles of trained ponies.

Some of the wild ponies were on Chincoteague and others on Assateague. The latter were the hardest to corral.

After a two-hour chase through the marsh land, the cowboys finally maneuvered the herds into one and started them toward Chincoteague.

The gallery of reporters and photographers first saw the animals at a gallop over the promontory of Assateague, their manes flying in the wind.

As the dark mass drew nearer, the whinnying of the ponies could be heard. To get the ponies to Chincoteague, it was necessary to make them swim across a stretch of water nearly a quarter of a mile wide.

A half dozen times the fishermen-cowboys got them started, only to have them balk and stampede in the other direction.

Finally, crowded on all sides by the riders, a pinto stallion, plunging into the salt water, started across. His devoted brood mares followed. And at their sides were the colts and fillies.

This was the critical point in the journey. Sometimes, with the current sweeping them along, it seemed that the colts must surely drown. How could those broomstick legs push back the water? Of what use were those tiny hobby-horse hoofs?

But they made it. After a great churning of the water and some wholesale whinnying, the herd reached shallow water and then sloshed up the beach of Chincoteague.

Other riders were waiting there to drive them to the corral, 2 miles away.

There, tomorrow, the best looking among the colts will see money change hands and then a strange, two-legged creature will step forward to lead them away.

The others will go back to the marshes and there multiply for another year.

Alexandria Girl, 17, Is Killed by Bolt

A bolt of lightning flashed down during a brief electrical storm yesterday and instantly killed Frances Moriarty, 17, of the 3800 block of Duke street, Alexandria, Va., while she was hanging clothes on a steel clothes lines.

The lightning seared into the girl's body as she put her hand on the steel line just as the bolt struck. Witnesses said Frances fell to the ground without uttering a sound.

The Alexandria rescue squad was summoned immediately, but the girl was pronounced dead on arrival. Coroner Llewellyn Powell said no inquest would be necessary.

Leavitt, Cummings Discuss Isle Rule

By the Associated Press.

New difficulties over administration of the Virgin Islands, which last year led to a Congressional inquiry, were taken up with Attorney General Cummings' office yesterday by Judge Albert Levitt.

At odds with Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer and other Interior Department officials, Judge Levitt, appointee of Cummings, mailed his resignation to President Roosevelt this month, and then came to the Capital.

Assertions that the Interior Department "interferred" with the district court in the Caribbean possession have been made to the President, Judge Levitt intimated.

Following the dinner the annual election of officers resulted in the unanimous choice of Ernest G. Walker as president, Melvin Hildreth as first vice president Joseph J. Cotter, second vice president, and Walter P. Bramhall as secretary and treasurer.

Hildreth, just returned from a visit to his home State of North Dakota, outlined the political history of Representative Lemke, third party candidate for President, explaining what he called "the North Dakota conspiracy" for appealing to impoverished voters in that State.

Experts of AAA To Gather Data On Milk Costs

Consumer Council Studies King's Suggestion of Protest to Courts.

Both sides in the District milk controversy spent yesterday "gathering information" preparatory to the AAA board decision on a proposed marketing agreement.

While transcribers were busy on the record of last week's AAA hearing, experts of the dairy section of the AAA were writing a questionnaire to be sent all local milk distributors. The information asked will pertain to the cost of handling milk from the time it leaves the farmer producer until it reaches the consumer's doorstep. The information is to help the officials decide if milk prices should go up.

Meanwhile the Consumers' Council, which has steadfastly opposed the AAA agreement to give the Government control over milk prices in the District of Columbia, was acting on the advice of Senator William H. King, of the Senate District Committee. Senator King told representatives of the council to protest to the courts if milk prices are boosted as a result of AAA action.

Gathering Information.

"We conferred with our attorneys today to see if anything can be done," said Mrs. John Boyle, jr., council chairman. "We want advice. We are gathering all the information we can get. That's all we can do now."

AAA officials said they wanted to get their questionnaires out in time to get answers before the decision is made. It will take "two or three more days," however, to get the question form ready, it was announced.

Farmers, while the controversy continues, are watching from both sides. Edith Prescott Allnutt, a dairy farmer of Rockville, Md., yesterday wrote Mrs. Boyle a letter urging her to visit a dairy farm and learn about conditions there.

Urges Inspection Trip.

"This side of the picture, of which you seem to know so little, should be very enlightening to you with a better understanding of it, perhaps you will see that your attack is directed to the wrong group," wrote Mrs. Allnutt.

At the same time a Virginia farmer said he was "waiting until the AAA makes its decision."

"Of course, I'm interested in this whole business," he said. "I am opposed to any plan that takes away our contracts with the dairies. If the AAA proposal doesn't do that, I'm for it, and I think I could speak for most of the farmers I know."

Albinos

a few minutes. Yesterday morning he set to work on another container. This one was lighter and was enclosed in a canvas bag. It weighed less than 100 pounds even with eight full-sized albino trout flopping around inside.

Orsinger and Charles E. Jackson, deputy commissioner of fisheries, began to smile in a satisfied sort of way. Everything was going to be all right. They would be the first to send albino trout whizzing through high altitudes. That's what they thought.

The plane for Dallas was to leave at 2:16 p. m. About an hour before the fish were to start for the airport, chaperoned by Orsinger and Jackson, the ice for their tank was delivered to the aquarium. It was cracked ice. It should have been in one piece. But still Orsinger and Jackson smiled.

Then the airline called. Sorry, but there wouldn't be room for the trout after all. Thunderstorms had turned back one ship and two of its passengers were being sent West on the 2 o'clock plane. The 100-pound fish carrier would make the load exceed the limit.

Jackson looked at the two specially constructed carriers. Then he looked at the fish, swimming resignedly in their tank. Then he looked at Orsinger.

"Well," he said, "I hate to disappoint those albinos. After all this trouble they ought to get a ride somewhere."

How the English Decorate Their Automobiles

A caravan of automobiles wriggled through Washington traffic last night and came to a smooth stop in front of the Shoreham Hotel at 8:59½ p. m.

Out of all the cars climbed 83 Englishmen. The cars are English, too, and the British cars and the Britishers are on a two-weeks tour of this country.

It will be a whirlwind tour.

The automobiles were shipped here aboard the Queen Mary and the caravan will land in England again on August 14.

The blunt front of all the cars last night looked like a general's chest. There were medals, flags and tags pinned all over the front.

"That, old chap," explained Joseph Edwards, "are insignias of clubs we belong to." Edwards is a manufacturing chemist from London and he said he is thoroughly enjoying this trip.

The caravan came yesterday from New York.

"Still, we aren't having much trouble driving even with that handicap," the English motorists explained.

About the United States members of the group remarked:

"Your roads are wonderful. We have nothing like them in England.

"I had a new experience this afternoon. My motor was absolutely 'drowned out' in that terrific deluge you had. Nothing like that ever happened in England . . .

"Your petrol is quite fine. We are getting good mileage . . .

"Still, I believe the scenery in England is much more beautiful . . ."

Members of the caravan are members of the Junior Auto Club. People in England take motoring seriously. It has evolved into more or less of a sport. People use the trains to travel, and use automobiles to have fun, the Englishmen explained.

A parting observation:

"Your drivers here are excellent. We didn't see one road hog on the way down from New York."

Steel Organizer Claims a Victory

Sterling, Ill., July 29 (AP).—A "major victory" in the national drive to unionize the steel industry was claimed tonight by Van A. Bittner, Western director of the movement, as a result of the settlement of a three-week-old strike at the Northwestern Barb Wire Co. plant here. It was the first strike involved in the steel union campaign.

Bittner asserted the end of the walkout—announced today by Robert Pilkington, mediator for the United States Labor Department—had been "negotiated b ythe Committee for Industrial Organization," the group supporting Miner John L. Lewis' fight for horizontal unions.

The strike settlement, made effective late today by unanimous vote of the newly organized Sterling unit of the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Plate Workers Union, granted the men a flat pay increase of 10 per cent, recognition of the Amalgamated as the representative of the strikers for collective bargaining purposes, return of all strikers "without discrimination" and amicable settlement of differences between employes and employer over working conditions.

Knox to Be Notified Of Nomination Today

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—Republican leaders from over the Nation began arriving today for the party's second big campaign ceremony in a week—the formal notification of Col. Frank Knox of his nomination for the Vice Presidency of the United States.

Tomorrow night in Chicago Stadium huge West Side auditorium, which has been the setting for many a memorable event in sports and politics, the Chicago publisher will accept officially his post as running mate to Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, the nominee for President.

Col. Knox in a speech, which will be broadcast nationally, will supplement the discussion of campaign issues initiated last week by Gov. Landon in his acceptance at Topeka.

Ancient City

century, he found, represented only one stage in an occupancy of the site—an occupancy which extended farther into antiquity.

The original occupants, he discovered, had been members of an unknown Indian race, whose culture closely resembled that of the Mound Builders of the Ohio Valley. They had constructed the first part of the great mound, carrying masses of clay from nearby lowlands in sacks made of skins.

They built a platform a few feet high—then something happened and work stopped. And the surface became littered with ashes, charcoal and bones.

Palisade of Logs.

Whether the same people who built the original mound also were responsible for the second stage of construction is not certain. During this stage, nevertheless, a palisade of logs was constructed.

At the western side of a slope a stepped approach was constructed up a gentle incline. It was made by placing four logs to serve as steps, with palmetto fronds and grasses covering the otherwise slippery treads. A human head without the jaw was first deposited below the log at the bottom of the stairway. This, it is believed, may have been a symbolic cornerstone for a temple.

Several smaller mounds around the site also were constructed.

At this point the archeological record ends and the story must be picked up next in the narrative of DeSoto's journeyings many centuries later, when an entirely different people lived on the site.

Deals Showing Loss Assailed At SEC Inquiry

Propriety of Transactions Questioned at Trust Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

The propriety of deals through which Interstate Equities Corporation, of New York, lost $800,000, was questioned by Securities and Exchange Commission counsel yesterday as the SEC continued hearings in its investigation of investment trusts.

The transactions were questioned by David Schenker, commission attorney, who also contended Interstate acted as a "superbank" in 1930, and was party to an agreement to buy oil stocks from "insiders" at more than double the price to be paid to another seller.

Winding up the examination of Edward R. Tinker, former president of Interstate, Schenker brought out what he termed a "colse" connection with Bancamerica-Blair Corporation, investment bank, which organized Interstate.

Bringing out that several Interstate directors also sat on the Bancamerica-Blair board, Schenker outlined three transactions Interstate undertook in conjunction with Bancamerica-Blair, on two of which the trust suffered a loss of $863,000.

Negotiations between Farley P. St. Clair, president of the St. Clair Consolidated Oil Corporation, Bancamerica-Blair, Interstate and Rio Grande Oil Co., working toward a merger of Rio Grande with the St. Clair company, were described by Schenker, who said Interstate had a one-third participation in the financing of the projected merger.

Interstate advanced a $2,812,000 loan to Charles S. Jones, Rio Grande executive officer, and his associates in connection with the proposed merger, the attorney said.

Although Interstate had only the one-third participation and although the agreement to make these loans had been carried out through Bancamercia, Schenker continued, Interstate advanced the etnire sum. In doing this, he said, it acted as a "superbank" for Bancamerica-Blair.

Eventually, in 1931, the attorney said, Interstate came out with a $395,000 loss.

In connection with these same transactions, Schenker said, Interstate and Bancamerica-Blair agreed to purchase 130,000 shares of Rio Grande stock from Jones and his associates at $35 a share, while at the same time contracting with the Rio Grande company itself for acquisition of 250,000 sares at $17. It was added, however, that these purchases were never consummated.

To fill two vacancies, one caused by death and the other by retirement, Vincent C. Burke, postmaster, has made 15 shifts in the supervisory forces of the principal postal stations and branches in the city. The changes are effective August 1.

Herbert E. Riley, former superintendent of the U street station, was appointed superintendent of Benjamin Franklin station, the largest in the city. It is located in the Postoffice Department, at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Riley succeeds the late Col. George L. Tait.

Ralph W. Van Fossen, who has been superintendent of Benning station, was transferred to Woodridge station to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Edward Turner. This appointment becomes effective tomorrow.

Van Fossen's place at Benning will be taken by Isaac McN. Bray, who has been a special clerk at Woodridge.

All the transfers made were promotions, except in the cases of two men who were shifted to smaller stations at their own request.

A Clean Senatorial Race.

Oklahoma now has the enviable prospect of a senatorial election campaign to be fought out on the basis of political issues and not of personal recrimination. The impressive success of Representative Josh Lee in the run-off primary Tuesday is notable for the fact that while carrying out an intensive speaking campaign, he scrupulously refrained from any mud-slinging.

The Republican nominee now pitted against him is Herbert K. Hyde, a former United States district attorney with an excellent record as a capable and fair prosecutor. He is a man who may be expected to make his challenge of the New Deal a constructive appeal to intelligence. As former associates in university debating—Lee the coach and Hyde a team member—they have respect for each other and similar standards of what is and is not ethical.

The size of the majority the State gave Lee, more than doubling his lead of the first primary over Gov. E. W. Marland, is clearly not a condonation of the WPA scandals which broke in his face, but rather a vote of confidence that he was not personally connected with the disgraceful conduct of some local directors. The vote seems also to have been a rebuke to the Marland machine, which has used State patronage even more flagrantly than the national Administration had used relief.

Even if one should assume that the normal Oklahoma Democratic majority and his personal popularity assure Lee of election to the Senate, he faces a major problem in what he will do with respect to the local WPA investigation now so clearly called for. It is a satisfaction to anticipate that whatever develops in that connection will be debated by the immediate rivals with a view to its governmental significance rather than to petty political advantage.

Six-Gun Barrage.

Skillful political direction was behind the radio barrage laid down on Gov. Landon Tuesday night by the Democratic chief executives of six other States. Criticism of any Governor seems to come with particular acidity when voiced by a jury of his peers. And there was distinct subtlety in having the executives of other Commonwealths, two of them adjacent to Kansas, condemn the State's rights position assumed by the Republican party. Such condemnation would have been much less effective if voiced by Federal officials.

The Democratic National Committee did a good job in arranging this broadcast, and to the extent of their pertinence the adverse comments will sooner or later have to be met by Mr. Landon. Moreover, some strategist had evidently co-ordinated the fire of the six political artillerists in advance in order to make it concentrated and secure a maximum of effect. This being so, what stands out is the comparative low explosive content of the verbal shells which were delivered.

Most of the criticism concentrated on charges that Mr. Landon's acceptance speech was insufficiently specific, or introduced ideas at variance with his record as Governor of Kansas, or that its promised reforms could not be carried against "the reactionary forces behind the Republican nominee," to quote Gov. Martin of Oregon. In other words, the attack suffered from the same lack of crystallization of which Mr. Landon's acceptance speech was accused.

The progress of the campaign may be expected to clarify the position of both major candidates. From their acceptance speeches alone it would certainly be difficult for any impartial observer to agree that Mr. Landon, at Topeka, exceeded Mr. Roosevelt, at Philadelphia, in "vague, far-reaching, indefinite generalities," to use the words of Gov. Earle's accusation. But regardless of the exaggerations of political attack and counter-attack, the maneuverings serve a useful purpose. They produce, well in advance of polling day, a clear idea of the character of the candidates and the general course each may be expected to pursue in the event of election. The electorate should expect no less and can demand no more.

As the relatively unknown candidate, more clarification of position is properly expected from Gov. Landon, the character and political philosophy of Mr. Roosevelt being already pretty well known. The Republican nominee of course is aware of this and really countered the attack of the Democratic Governors in advance by the promise in his acceptance speech to discuss issue "in detail" as the campaign progresses.

A specific challenge made by Gov. Green of Rhode Island calls particularly for detailed answer. Mr. Green quoted the Republican nominee's assertion that: "We shall amend the social security act to make it workable." Quite rightly, the Rhode Island Governor asks for Mr. Landon's evidence as to why the present law is unworkable. That it can be improved by the lessons of experience goes without saying. That its future amendment should be made an issue of partisan politics rather than of technical knowledge is an argument of very dubious validity.

Administrative Law Problems.

After prolonged study, the committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association has recommended that a Federal administrative court be created to take over functions now exercised by numerous administrative agencies of the Government and a few special administrative courts. This court would be subdivided into branches for hearing particular classes of cases "to the end that the benefit of expert and experienced judges over particular subject matters may be achieved." Under certain conditions appeals could be taken from its decision, to the Circuit Courts of Appeals and to the United States Supreme Court.

At first glance it may seem as if the members of the bar association are advocating changes that would merely add to the complexity of the already intricate governmental machinery. Instead of requiring new agencies to deal with executive rules and regulations having the force of law, believers in the rigid segregation of legislative and executive functions may argue that the remedy lies in placing restraints upon the executive branch of government.

As a matter of fact, the members of the committee are acutely conscious of the evils of excessive delegation of power by Congress and call attention to certain outstanding examples of legislative irresponsibility, such as the national industrial recovery act and the agricultural adjustment act.

Nevertheless, they realize that modern conditions necessarily call for a vast body of administrative law no matter how jealously Congress may guard its legislative prerogatives. Congress has discharged its duties when it has outlined the general policies to be followed by governmental administrative agencies. The latter must be entrusted with the working out of details. Otherwise the statute books would be cluttered with laws impossible of enforcement or unsuited to the rapidly changing needs of the times.

So long as the Federal Government was chiefly concerned to protect the rights of the individual against the encroachments of other persons, or of the Government itself, the problems created by administrative law-making were of slight importance. But when the Government started to assume new responsibilities for regulating trade and industry and protecting labor, the comparatively well-defined distinction between the functions of legislative and executive agencies began to disappear.

As Col. O. R. McGuire, chairman of the bar association's committee on administrative law, reminds us in a recent article, the growth of the administrative branch of government has been in progress ever since the days of Washington. But the period of marked expansion dates from the close of the Civil War. It is extremely important to view our present-day problems growing out of these developments against the factual background, instead of discussing them as if they were creations of the New Deal.

The United States has been amazingly slow to recognize the existence of a kind of law-making that does not respect the traditional division of all governmental authority into three distinct branches—legislative, executive and judicial. As a result the country is without the judicial machinery for protecting citizens against executive tyranny, or errors that may prove quite as injurious. The bar association report strikes at such evils by urging that immediate steps be taken to provide for expert judicial review in all controversies for which there is now no review, or a very limited one.

We have special administrative courts, such as those dealing with money claims against the Government, and tax cases, but no comprehensive centralized court for reviewing the orders of our numerous regulatory commissions. An agency of this kind, equipped to take over the functions of the special courts and extend its operations to cover other branches of the Government, would not only protect the citizen's rights but would free the existing judicial establishment from burdensome duties that it cannot handle efficiently.

Such a reform would really simplify our present cumbrous governmental machinery by adapting it to the demands of an era no longer content with governments of limited and strictly defined powers.

Disservice.

If the remarks attributed to Hanford MacNider at Chicago are typical of the propaganda to be broadcast by the Republican Service League, G. O. P. leaders may profitably reflect on whether this organization will be an asset or liability in the campaign. Mr. MacNider was quoted as follows:

> If ever our outfit had something to bite on, this is the time. It is a natural, with two splendid former service men heading our ticket and a President in office who has gone out of his way to humiliate and minimize the service of every man and woman who marched out with the colors.

During the World War Gov. Landon, the Republican candidate, served as a first lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service. Much better known is the military record of Col. Knox, the Vice Presidential nominee. Former soldiers now enlisted in the cause of the G. O. P. are justified in making the most of these two records. But it is grossly unfair for Mr. MacNider to imply that either of the candidates he indorses would be more amenable to organized pressure from veterans' lobbies than President Roosevelt has been.

Presumably the former national commander of the American Legion refers to President Roosevelt's bonus vetoes when he accuses the latter of "humiliating and minimizing the service" of every man and woman who marched out with the colors. If so, his charge is on a par with Coughlin's diatribes. The President has repeatedly explained his attitude: since his choice was between limited advantages for veterans and the public welfare he had no reasonable alternative to an emphatic veto. An attitude of humility on the part of veterans who applied group pressure to Congress to obtain special privileges during a difficult recovery period would be more appropriate than Mr. MacNider's slanders on Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. MacNider's implication is, of course, that Gov. Landon and Col. Knox would have followed a different course. There is not the slightest warrant to any such assumption. By taking it for granted that the G. O. P. standard bearers would become tools of the veterans' lobby, the chairman of the so-called Service League does them a grave disservice.

A New Job-Making Splurge.

With the announcement of 352 new grants to local communities, the Public Works Administration has taken over a new role. So far as these projects are concerned, that organization will merely supplement the work-relief activities of the WPA. Compared with the previous undertakings of PWA, the new projects are small, consisting of school buildings, court houses, bridges, sewers, streets, etc. They must be completed within a relatively short period. And, more important still, only relief labor can be employed.

The requirements of this latest mandate from the President virtually transform the PWA into a second WPA. There is considerable hope that the step-down will be temporary. Indeed, the President seems to have grouped together a list of small projects for which relief workers are available and which can be completed with a minimum of skilled labor. Many of the other undertakings which the PWA has asked him to approve are of a more substantial character.

Nevertheless, it is an ominous trend which leads away from the idea of building useful and permanent public works and toward the objective of creating temporary jobs for the sole purpose of absorbing unemployment. The WPA has already carried the country much too far in that direction. When the PWA is compelled to follow the same route to inefficiency, waste of public funds and political jobbery, the trend cannot be viewed without apprehension, even if announced as purely temporary.

WPA is an inefficient stop-gap organization created to give temporary employment regardless of cost. Its philosophy is primarily that of expediency. Its technique is to muddle through with no regard for expense and with only futile gestures against political corruption within its ranks.

On the contrary, PWA has succeeded in constructing some very useful major projects with a minimum of waste and political interference. As a remedy for unemployment, its operations have been a disappointment to those who thought with little evidence that the Government could take up all the depression slack in private jobs. Yet the PWA is the proper agency through which future public works of permanent value should be constructed. To subordinate that organization to WPA, or to reduce its standards to the level approved by Harry L. Hopkins, would be disastrous.

Another aspect of these new allotments is worthy of comment. The work relief program is being expanded at a time when industrial operations are advancing steadily and employment is substantially increased. In such circumstances the Administration ought rather to be curtailing its extravagant outlays. Instead, the WPA is going forward at a normal pace and the PWA has been instructed to supplement the work-relief program. There seems to be no co-ordination between the two programs. Yet together they are moving in the wrong direction.

This situation is the more difficult to understand because of fears that the third immense work-relief fund may not last throughout the fiscal year. Relief expenditures are unusually heavy because of the drought. But savings could probably be made in other sections where employment has increased. Instead of taking such precautions, the President has enlarged the program of artificial jobs through the PWA. This does not appear as a policy worked out in the public interest as much as the haphazard result of various individual efforts to make a splurge prior to the November election.

Out West grasshoppers are eating the crops and nothing much is being done about it. We people are simply lacking in adaptability. When locusts swarm in and eat the crops in the Congo basin, the natives eat the locusts.

A visiting Frenchman wants to know what Americans do with their leisure. If there's any truth in a certain adage, a lot of them spend it repenting.

Truly, politics makes strange bedfellows. That so many various types and classes of men will fall for the same bunk is a matter that passes comprehension.

On To The Stadium.

Letters To The Editor.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

From A Critical Reader.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If you concede the right of a subscriber to criticize his morning paper, then read this letter. If you make no such concession, then consign this letter to the waste basket and save yourself a few minutes time.

First, there seems to be a tendency among all newspapers to opinionate their readers rather than confine their work to statements of fact and letting the readers form their own opinions based on true facts. If The Post were judged by a piece of its recent reporting, I believe it would stand high on a list of opinionating newspapers. I refer to the A. F. of L. controversy between Messrs. Green and Lewis. The Post treated this issue as if there was little for Lewis to do except bow to the will of Green and disband his C. I. O. under pain of being ousted from the A. F. of L. In this case, if The Post had made one little simple statement of fact—namely, that it takes two-thirds majority to oust a recalcitrant union—its reporting would not have been so lop-sided. Mr. Lewis has over one-third of the A. F. of L. membership on his side.

Second, the practice of saving up unimportant news items for fill-ins on a news-scarce day makes little difference to the average reader. It has been observed that The Post publishes such save-ups under press association releases as if they were recent news. This, of course, misleads the reader as to the time the event happened. Not long ago The Post published an account of the auction sale of some yacht equipage of the British royalty. This item had been carried by another publication a week before its appearance in The Post. A reader of The Post account could have well supposed that the sale had occurred the day before The Post published the account.

Third, the editor of The Post has called it "an independent" newspaper. Did the editor, by any chance, mean politically independent? If so, I feel inclined to comment that the seemingly impossible has occurred. W. L. KELLOGG.
Washington, July 27.

Educating Motorists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a motorist of several years' standing, I naturally have had occasion to observe traffic conditions and to meditate over the utter hopelessness of the situation.

It is my opinion, however, that there is one possible solution to the problem worth experimenting with. Most of us who drive cars come in contact with, or observe, drivers, who disregard every phase of the traffic rules. As mere citizens, we can only look and disapprove, but as so-called informers we can turn over the license numbers of these culprits to the Traffic Bureau, which by a system of card notices or warnings, can remind these drivers that they have violated the law. Thus, by this novel process of continually calling these violations to the attention of the guilty parties, an improvement is bound to take place.

Susceptibility to disregard rules and regulations is innate. Fines, jail sentences, etc., have not reduced traffic fatalities, as statistics will show. It is only through a system of education that real results can be accomplished, and in my opinion, the plan which I have prescribed above, will do the trick.

Problems Of Democracy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You did well the past week to publish the articles on "Public Opinion" by DeWitt Clinton Poole and on "The League Failure" by Charles G. Fenwick. The articles bear on two problems we must solve soon—two of the three which will destroy the American democracy within some decades.

I do not dissent from your own optimism about the long-run possibilities of democracy, but the short run—the next half century or so—will certainly lead to disaster unless we can reverse the post-war currents, both domestic and regarding our foreign policy.

One problem is the organization of industrial security. Instead of giving us security, our peace advocates—well-meaning but short-sighted emotionalists—have lined Uncle Sam up on the side of the military aggressors. Our neutrality legislation says in effect, "At them, Hitler! On, Mikado! Sic 'em Mussolini! The victims of your aggression will get no help from us or from our resources. Tear up the world! We'll wait patiently till your expanding empires can lick us!" T. A. B. BAREFOOT.

Women In Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing this letter as an answer to the one by Juanita Kerwin Williams on July 23.

I am inclined to agree with Mr. Waltman when he said, "that women are most admirable when they confine their intellectual interest to the products of the dry-goods counter." I also agree with Mr. Waltman's denial of women's right to be interested in and take part in economic and governmental affairs.

I have said and always will say women's place is in the home, taking care of the household work and the household work alone and not having their noses in governmental and other peoples' affairs. That's what's wrong with the country now; the women are trying to run the country, but the men will not have it that way.

Controversy Over Drought Relief

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to have been a controversy raging in the correspondence section of your esteemed paper between a Mr. Smith and one Thurman Hill. Mr. Hill's letter dated July 27, purporting to have been written from Independence, Kansas, appeared in your issue of July 25. According to both the local telephone directory and the city directory, Mr. Thurman Hill lives in Washington, D. C. Inquiry elicits the information that he came to Washington from Independence, Kansas, but that he was in this city throughout the week which began July 19, 1936.

If there are inconsistencies in those facts, please do not expect me to explain them. They are of slight consequence compared to the many serious inconsistencies in the New Deal. The said Deal of Novelty has so many expert apologists working for it full time and at fair compensations (bill to be sent taxpayers in future administrations) that all possible explanations should be left to their good offices.

We, the unsuspecting public, have been advised by writers who are wise in the publicity ways of this city of politics and propaganda that this modern Federalist Party, which interloped in 1932, has staffs of publicists constantly on guard to see that it is promptly defended from every attack in the letters-to-the-editor columns of all newspapers. That is something difficult to prove, and scarcely worthwhile; for it may occasionally prove itself. Machine-made propaganda, like machine politics, sometimes gets in the way of its own blundering footsteps.

But now to the meat of the controversy, if any. One point was all I made, viz., that a certain Associated Press story, showing sums then just having been allocated for drought relief, presented a most astonishing geographical phenomenon of drought and non-drought areas bounded almost exactly by four straight State lines, with Colorado, to the west of a certain "typical prairie State," having been allocated $15,000; Nebraska, to the north, $62,040; Missouri, to the east, $85,763, and Oklahoma to the south, $101,685; whereas Kansas, home of Gov. Landon, got only $5,071.

That seemed like a phenomenon interesting enough to provoke a gentle smile and a slight inquiry by somebody, even though a similar ratio of distribution were not thereafter maintained among the States mentioned. In an effort to provoke thought which might lead to a solution of this mysterious meteorological situation of rectangular rain distribution, I suggested that there may have been some special reason, unknown to us ordinary mortals, why the Lord would thus have favored one State above its neighbors with rains to such an extent that it needed scarcely any governmental drought relief. I especially recognized the point that the great, big-hearted New Deal, givers of the more abundant life, did, of course, accurately sense the needs of the several communities with complete objectivity and entirely apart from any worldly considerations.

And then the ghost of Mr. Hill comes forth to state that I failed to say that the allotment was made, on a basis of need, to drought States—such ingratitude! Mr. Hill's fact finder does, however, compensate me by specifically admitting, with insistence, the "fact" upon which my former epistle was based, viz., that the drought condition, and hence the need of relief, did extend along State boundaries with the favor, as to the rains, on Gov. Landon's side of the several lines.

The thing yet remaining to be done is for the persons who have such information available to supplement the foregoing generalities with figures, so that the interested citizens may actually know that the responsible officials are not going to permit partisan politics to control the amount of relief the people of a State shall get at this stage of the game. Whether this little "tempest in a teapot" by two stray sons of Kansas had anything to do with getting the matter straightened out will never be known.

But there is one horrible insinuation in the Hill letter—that the experiment of listing furrows in the fields of western Kansas, in the hope they would serve as a barrier against blowing dust, stands out as "Exhibit No. 1" among the cases of "boondoggling with Federal funds." Of course Mr. Hill's ghost writer knows all about boondoggling. Hence, far be it from me to make an outright challenge to the professional opinion of such an expert. But I do rise to inquire just what the elements of the case are which make it such a vicious boondoggle to use a small amount of Federal funds to buy gasoline and oil to enable farmers, using their own tractors and donating their time, to do the man-sized job of listing these furrows.

It must be admitted, even by swivel-chair experts in Washington, that they did some good in holding a part of the drifting dust, at least in places where there was enough rain to set the ridges before the next severe dust storm. And, please, Mr. Expert, wherein was that honest experiment a worse boondoggle than the use of Federal funds to pay salaries of the teachers and to buy leisure for the learners of that highly useful art of eurythmic dancing.

The whole of the letter—including the intimate homey ending to justify Mr. Hill's signature—was an excellent example of that new literary style known, to all who are New-Deal wise, as Michaelsonism. It consists of assorted precocious and putrid insinuations against one's opponents, though the facts on which they are so lightly based are neutral or even sometimes favorable to that opponent. This style does not resemble the cuttlefish. It is not so material as that. It resembles, more, the murky fluid with which that ungallant animal beclouds himself from his fighting enemy for purposes of escape, or from his unsuspecting prey while sucking it in to destruction.

The Post Impressionist

Mermaid and Trainer

Post Office, Thursday.

WE HAVE received the following lyrical-epic, or epical-lyric (we're not quite certain which) from Mr. Reginald Wright Kauffman, a writer for whose talents we have long entertained the highest esteem. We were delighted to get the piece, are pleased to publish it, and we shall lose no time in sending its author a fitting honorarium.

However, we do not wish it to be understood that our publication of any communication necessarily commits the Post-Impressionist to the sentiments therein expressed. We consider the present verses a work of art: for their artistic value, we print them. But, while admiring their form, we firmly disassociate ourselves from any participation in their content.

That content appears to refer to a recent controversy in international athletics. And we are resolved to maintain, in all its pristine purity, the noncontroversial character of this Column—except when we feel like writing controversy ourselves.

* * *

"I like champagne," the mermaid owned.
Said the trainer: "That's enough!
That doesn't go a yard with me—
That morning-after stuff.
You must have known, young woman, you
Were swimming for a fall—
How champagne breaks your backstroke and Cracks up your Camden Crawl.

"Buzz-water won't with water mix;
In spite of its renown,
Each peg that shoves you up a peg
Is sure to let you down.
It gnaws the pneumogastric nerve,
Turns red corpuscles blue;
It cramps your style, and—what is worse—
It cramps your tummy, too."

* * *

"Last night," the swimmer said, "I took—"
The trainer said, said he:
"I saw you on your way to bed—
"And now you're telling me?
You took? Do you know what it took?
It took some nerve—and then
It took the tug-of-war team, Miss,
To waken you at ten."

"Alas, kind sir," the swimmer moaned,
"I failed—but have you striven?
I've heard of cocktail parties here
In your own stateroom given."
The trainer frowned: "That's different;
And I need say no more
Than that I never take a drink
Before I shut my door."

* * *

"But listen!" cried the mermaid sweet;
"If I was careless, then
What about other stars who were:
Almost a hundred men?"
In vain her words! The trainer growled:
"Your plea's not worth a dime.
My eyes, my dear, can only see
One sinner at a time.

"You should have thought of younger folks:
The younger athletes, dear;
You should have tried your best to set
A good example here.
Esprit de Corps has fled your heart,
Your patriotism's tired,
Your conduct's un-Olympian:
I'm sorry—but you're fired!"

* * *

He threw her out; he heaved a sigh
Of duty bravely done,
A button pushed, an order gave:
"Steward, two drinks—for one."
But she the correspondents called—
What guile in woman lurks!
She must have joined the gun-team, for

AHEAD OF TIME.

The American Ambassador to Spain, the Hon. Claude G. Bowers, once wrote a book on the Reconstruction Period in the United States and called that volume "The Tragic Era." We understand that he is now preparing a book dealing with the Spanish Revolution—but is at a loss for a title.

ADVICE.

"Girls Guard Madrid!"
Thus a local contemporary exclaims.
If the Leftist Government is drafting them, it will be wise to use a highly selective draft system. A good many of the girls that we saw, when in Madrid, were less of the defensive than of the come-hither type.
However, as for some of the others, all the Government would have to do would be to turn them loose and let them bark.

Silkworm Culture.

In an effort to introduce the production of silk on a commercial scale into this country, mulberry trees and silkworm eggs from Europe are being distributed among the farmers of Michigan.

It isn't necessary to provide mulberry trees for the silkworms. Those vermiculi will devour bois d'arc leaves with gusto. They are voracious creatures, silkworms are, and will get up in the night to eat up green stuff. They have short lives and try to make the most of their brief duration by chewing every green sprig within their limited range.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

A Ghost Town.

Bowed under the burden of a big trash can, a man in ragged overalls picked his way over the rotten planks of the dock jutting out from one of the abandoned sardine canneries. Selecting a hole where the flooring had given away to weather and neglect, he dumped the load into the dirty tide. Huge fish heads were washing to and fro in the shallow water as the sea ebbed out. Filth covered the narrow beach where a half-wild dog, with yellow eyes, foraged in competition with the scavenger gulls—tin cans, a discarded crank shaft, old shoes, old tires and dirt.

On the next dock three laborers, with peaveys, were loading great wooden beams onto a barge. In the warehouse of the United States Army Corps of Engineers clerks were checking out the remaining marine supplies of the abandoned Passamaquoddy Dam job.

So many coils of rope, so many marker buoys, so many anchors and lanterns and so many feet of cable and chain. A seagoing tug was expected in to pick up two barges used on the job and tow them down to Boston.

* * * *

Along the dirty Main street men with nothing to do occupied themselves doing nothing. This was the principal occupation of a large proportion of Eastport's man-power for a long time before the Quoddy job began. It is likely to be their principal occupation for a long time to come.

The stores displayed in their windows poor, cheap merchandise, and not much of that, but most of them also showed photographs of Franklin D. Roosevelt between crossed American flags, in anticipation of the President's visit.

Mr. Roosevelt has abandoned Eastport to poverty and decay after showing the town a beautiful vision of big factories, a crowded seaport and prosperity. The people seem unable to believe that "the Government" will go through with its announced intention of closing down the job with the work less than half finished and $7,000,000 invested.

But "the Government" isn't kidding, and in two weeks the construction will have tailed off to complete suspension. After that only a few hands will be left on the Quoddy job, principally clerical and administrative help housed in the Quoddy model village or in the executive houses up on Snob Hill.

Not quite comparable to the ghost towns of the West, Eastport is, nevertheless, sick of a wasting disease. It was a strong, brave town in its time, with men who went out through treacherous whirlpools created by the Fundy tides and ships calling in from everywhere. Many of the men didn't come back and they are remembered with weathered headstones in the graveyards inscribed "Lost at Sea."

There are various explanations why Eastport lost her gumption, but one of them seems quite sound.

For example, the Government inspectors suddenly became very particular about the quality of the sardines packed in the canneries. They would select a few fish out of a hogshead, and if they found a couple bearing a certain kind of spots, would condemn the whole catch as being diseased.

The fishermen claimed they had been eating such fish themselves for generations and selling them into the market without unpleasant effects. Moreover, Portuguese and Scandinavian sardines are admitted to the American trade sight unseen.

But a few hundred yards across the water the town of Lubec is carrying on the sardine trade and doing all right under the same handicaps. And Lubec, on a different neck of land, is 15 miles from the railroad.

It seems far-fetched to say that psychology locked Eastport, but, nevertheless, there is an air of defeat in the listlessness and filth of the town, whereas Lubec is lively, neat and apparently self-confident.

There is a settlement of Passaquoddy Indians at Perry, 6 miles from Eastport, and the Indians live in filthy hovels—one of those rural slums that Mr. Roosevelt has been talking about these last few years. But the Indians gave up the battle long ago and settled down to be wards of the Government. Now their conquerors are being pulled down to their own level, apparently unable to call on any power within themselves to rouse up and resume the fight.

New Treatment Devised For Asthma Sufferers

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—A new treatment for asthma, which enables patients to sniff relief by inhaling vapor, was available tonight.

It was recommended particularly for children in a report in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

The remedy was not entirely new, but a new form of an older treatment. It used the same compound—epinephrine hydrochloride—which had been used before in hypodermic injections.

Birthday of Il Duce Is Marked by Silence

Rome, July 29 (AP).—Not an official word marked the Fifty-third birthday today of Premier Mussolini, protagonist of youth.

Il Duce has long proclaimed youth a cardinal principle of his government—and no newspapers carried a syllable to remind their chief he was a year older.

Official Rome, however, did observe another anniversary. Flags were at half staff to signify the thirty-sixth anniversary of the assassination of King Humbert, father of Victor Emmanuel.

Mussolini appeared at his offices as usual. Later he joined his family, and in the privacy of his home enjoyed the only celebration he would permit.

Helpless Pawns

Average Austrian Believes Europe's March to War Has Sealed His Doom as He Watches Reich's Mailed Fist.

By Richard D. McMillan.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Editor's note: Austrians see themselves as mere pawns on the political chessboard of Europe, says Richard D. McMillan, United Press staff correspondent, who has covered many of the most significant developments in recent Austrian history, in the following article, fourth of a series of six on the tense European situation.

Vienna, July 29.—The average Austrian believes the world's worst war is inevitable and that he is only a helpless pawn in a diplomatic game that dictators are playing on the chess board of Europe.

That apprehension stretches through most of central Europe. The new Austro-German agreement seals the fates of the two nations as though they were one.

This move has upset Europe's secret military plans and treaties and has caused a new race for balance of power on the continent. The man in Vienna views the mailed fist of rearmed Germany as even more ominous than at the zero hour of 1914. He sees Germany carving out new channels to power.

Hitler has smashed through the door which barred him in Austria for many years and has thrown Europe into a frantic scramble for new alignments.

Whether Hitler, Premier Benito Mussolini and Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, the three dictators who engineered the Austro-German pact, did so with a view to entangling Europe's military alliances by forming an antisoviet bloc from the Baltic to the Mediterranean is problematical.

What is certain, however, is that realignment already is under way at breakneck speed. Millions of Austrians earnestly and fearfully believe that their lives hang in the balance of the daring game which Hitler has played, bewildering a world not yet recovered from Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland and Il Duce's conquest of Ethiopia.

Believed at Pact.

Generally, Austrians are relieved that peace has been signed with Germany after three years of an undeclared state of war, during which the Nazis fought to win the country to the banner of the third Reich.

The secret battle for power momentarily has turned elsewhere. Many Austrians believe they are now being used only as chips in a poker game, and that Nazi infiltration is about to sweep the country which they long have fought to keep free.

The philosophy of the average Austrian is:

"When the western powers, especially Britain and France, are giving an example of complete vacillation and fear before the big men of Berlin and Rome, who are our neighbors, what can they expect from us—a tiny nation—if not to obey the dictators' orders? The western powers urged us to make peace with Germany, and now that we have succeeded in the difficult and prolonged task, they are surprised and even bewildered."

What caused the sudden change on the part of Hitler by which he renounced one of the most cherished parts of his program—that of bringing all Germans under one roof? Or does he still intend to win his native land into the political system he controls?

These questions are bothering Austrian laymen and officials as well as other Europeans.

Hitler undoubtedly was anxious to prevent a revival of the Stresa front—Great Britain, France and Italy. With relations strained between Italy and Britain, his most effective course was to gain Mussolini's friendship, and the best way to do that was to reach an agreement with Austria, of which Mussolini is virtual protector.

Four Points.

1. Prove to Great Britain that his desire for peace was sincere.
2. Make Britain hesitant about throwing in her lot too closely with France.
3. Leave his own hands free for moves elsewhere on the Continent.
4. Keep Europe guessing.

Every nation considers that Hitler, in collaboration with Mussolini, has changed the political map of Europe over night. Diplomats, unable to keep pace with the speed of events, have drawn the following picture of the newly created situation and the problems involved:

By making peace with Austria, thus "neutralizing Mussolini," Hitler not only has kept the Italians out of the French camp, but also widened the gap between Paris and her only sure military allies, Soviet Russia and Czechoslovakia.

While the Western powers continue their cautious maneuvering about problems concerning themselves and Nazi Germany, the spotlight in the east shines on 70,000,000 people living along the Danube basin, comprising the Little and Balkan Ententes, of which Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Greece and Turkey are members.

Those five states were jolted by the "new deal" consummated by Berlin and Vienna, and are increasingly conscious of the expanding might of the German eagle, whose wings were clipped 20 years ago, but which are now stretching out with new vigor.

They are casting anxious eyes on Hitler's progress in breaking down the system of military alliances which the victorious powers in the World War have been building with great pains since 1918 to protect their spoils.

Hitler claims these alliances were set up for the purpose of surrounding Germany with an iron ring. His peace agreement with Austria was a diplomatic triumph, as it was accomplished without advice or help from the western powers or the League of Nations.

Europe On Edge.

Fear of what Der Fuehrer's next move may be has all the chancelleries of Europe on edge.

France's allies are convinced that gradually they are being farther separated from their western partner and now, with the exception of Czechoslovakia and Bussia, are subject more than ever to German might.

Any one or all of them may succumb to the temptation and fall in with Germany.

Already Yugoslavia, the bulwark of the Little Entente, is under pressure to join the dictators' bloc. And the government of young King Peter is sitting on the fence, wondering which way to jump. Hitler's new triumph in Austria undoubtedly will sway Belgrade.

If Yugoslavia were to secede from the French system a political avalanche would follow.

Rumania and probably Czechoslovakia would scurry for safety, probably under the wings of the German eagle, while Paris and Moscow looked on helplessly.

What will be the outcome of the present struggle behind the locked doors of Europe's chancelleries? No one can tell, but many seasoned observers—some who foresaw the events of 1914-1918—are convinced that the ultimate answer is war.

Britain Speeds Plans to Build 'Greatest Navy'

Two Battleships Will Be Begun in 1937 Regardless of Cost.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 29.—Great Britain hastened plans for the empire's "greatest navy" tonight.

Rushing to bolster the empire's defenses, the first lord of the admiralty announced construction of two battleships will begin in January, 1937, with price considerations to be argued out later.

"Arrangements for laying down these ships," Sir Samuel Hoare told the House of Commons, "are being made in full accord with the declared policy of his majesty's government to press on with naval replacement and the new construction program with all possible speed."

The new construction program will mark an end to the five-power Washington Naval Treaty with its limitations on defense, and the coming into effect of a tri-power accord.

Under it, wide latitude is provided the signatories—Britain, France and the United States—with the proviso they exchange information on plans before construction is begun.

Peter Macdonald, Conservative, asserted he had under "close attention" reports Japan contemplated warships with 18-inch guns.

Hoare answered, however, his only information on such plans was from unofficial reports and "I have no information from any other source which would lead me to attach any credence to such rumors."

Although a special committee still is investigating the question of England's vulnerability to attack, Sir Samuel said its recommendations will not affect design of the new ships.

Plans to build the new vessels were announced after withdrawal of the present home fleet from Mediterranean waters. Supplementary defense estimates were hiked to provide about $940,000,000 for the year's allotment to army, navy and royal air force.

10,000 Sailors Sought to Man New U. S. Ships

Total Strength of 100,000 Seamen Set; Navy to Launch 23 Vessels.

By the Associated Press.

To man 23 new fighting ships scheduled for completion this year, the Navy has started a selective recruiting drive for 10,000 gobs to boost its total enlisted strength to 100,000 men.

Congress authorized an increase in man-power to the 100,000 figure to be reached by July 1 next year. Navy officers said yesterday that, despite friendly competition from the Army and Civilian Conservation Corps, more men were applying for Navy enlistment than could be accepted.

The plans for expanding personnel were given urgency yesterday when Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, said he had "not the slightest doubt" that construction of two new battleships would begin next year.

Autumn Contracts.

He said contracts probably would be let sometime this fall. Renewed indications came from abroad simultaneously that keels for two new British ships would be laid next January.

During the last year a daily average of 88,000 men have manned the 324 Navy ships. Officers estimated that this number gave combatant ships 85 per cent of their enlisted complements, the minimum essential to efficient peace-time operation.

The 10,000 to be enlisted will provide a daily average strength of 96,500 during the next year, officers said, and all will be assigned to duty on new ships as they are commissioned, or fill vacancies left by transfers of men now on ships in service.

Two New Battleships.

The first opportunity of private shipyards in 20 years to bid on a capital ship was indicated by Admiral Standley's remarks predicting the United States would start building two new battleships next year.

The naval appropriation act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, provided that this country could not start new battlships until some other nation did.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, said in the House of Commons in London yesterday that Great Britain would lay the keels of two new capital ships next January.

The cost of the West Virginia totaled $26,800,000, as compared with the $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 figure mentioned in recent Congressional discussion of new battleships.

Louisianans Reach Milk Price Accord

Baton Rouge, La., July 29 (AP).—Settlement of the five-day milk strike which threatened New Orleans' supply and caused acute shortages tonight awaited ratification of a tentative agreement drawn by representatives of striking dairymen, pasteurizers and distributors.

The agreement meets the price demand of the strikers and calls for an increase in the per hundredweight price of fluid milk (used for bottling) from $1.85 to $2.32.

The arbitration board's basis for settlement will be submitted to the farmers at a meeting of the Dairy Farmers' Protective League at Kentwood, La., tomorrow.

Leaders predicted acceptance of the agreement.

Until it is approved the strikers will continue their picketing activities to prevent the flow of milk into New Orleans.

Democratic Club Heads Join G. O. P.

Silverhill, Ala., July 29 (AP).—The officers of the Baldwin County League of Young Democrats announced today they had gone over to the Republican banner.

Secretary Frank [illegible] announced his resignation and said that President Albert Koehler and Vice President John Bowman, both of Elberta, also had resigned. The league had a small membership and was active in only a portion of the county.

The three gave as the reason for their political change the statement "Roosevelt is spending too much."

Judge Blocks Hanging 10,000 Were to See

Louisville, Ky., July 29 (AP).—Federal Judge Elwood Hamilton today blocked the hanging of Rainey Bethea, colored former convict, 22, which 10,000 persons expected to see a woman sheriff conduct at Owensboro, Ky., Friday.

Bethea's lawyers represented that his constitutional rights were transgressed at the trial in which he pleaded guilty to assaulting criminally a 70-year-old white woman. Judge Hamilton granted a writ of habeas corpus, with a hearing next Wednesday morning.

studied as a possible source of further revenue by the special committee, paid $1,899,142.95 to the District government. This was $108,539.15 less than they yielded in 1935.

Among other collections were the following:

Public convenience stations, $1,826.42.

Recorder of deeds, $164,592.75.

Public library, $23,064.91.

Towers' report showed $6,560,736.27 in back taxes remained uncollected at the end of the fiscal year. Real estate accounts for $2,309,756.42 of this amount, but only $1,712,064.24 is due on 1923 assessments. Carried on the books of the tax collectors are accounts dating back to 1877.

Delinquent tangible personal taxes amount to $2,976,575.26 and date back to 1903. Unpaid intangibles levies aggregate $1,038,835.39 and run back to 1918.

Public utility taxes unpaid at the end of the fiscal year amounted to $222,844.10. Such levies date back only to 1932.

south. Troops massed for attack at Zaragoza on the north. The government still held the Guadarrama Mountain passes which protect Madrid.

There was a new formation of troops to besiege Seville and Cordoba, southern rebel strongholds. Asturian miners armed with dynamite bombarded insuregt barracks at Oviedo.

Rebel reinforcements sped toward Zaragoza, ordered to oppose the oncoming Loyalists, and to cut off Madrid's connections with Barcelona. This would sever the two principal fortresses of the Liberals.

March Toward San Sebastian.

(Other Fascist forces marched toward the San Sebastian area, where fighting was reported today, from Pamplona. Northern Commander Gen. Emilio Mola planned further assaults on the Guadarrama passes.

(Troop trains en route to Madrid, with machine guns guarding station platforms, were reported at Valladolid by W. W. Keen Butcher, of Philadelphia, who reached Bordeaux, France, today.)

Among the asserted Fascist sympathizers arrested in the government purge were the wife of the transatlantic flier, Capt. Julio Ruiz de Alda; and the wife and daughter of Gen. Emilio Barrera.

Sub-officers were being entrusted with the command of superiors ousted in the shake-up.

In a broadcast from Tangier, Morocco, Gen. Franco had declared, "If all goes well, I shall establish my first headquarters at Seville."

Not Short of Money.

"We are not short of money, but the danger lies in what help the Spanish government may receive from Moscow and the Popular Front government in France."

(Leftist forces, Franco said, were short of fuel and food, and "it is only a matter of time until they finally surrender.")

Spanish Brown Shirts and Blue Shirts were said to be parading in Segovia, where several hundred Leftists were imprisoned. Rebel troops escaped from El Pardo were reported congregating there, beyond the Guadarramas.

An Escorial report said a Loyalist airplane bombarded a rebel troop train moving southward after insurgents fired from train windows. Huelva was quiet.

Submarine Hit By Rebel Shell, Reported Sunk

By the Associated Press.

Gibraltar, July 29.—Spanish rebel seaplanes battling loyalist submarines tonight were believed to have sunk one U-boat, with a crew of 40, and to have disabled another.

The C-3 was bombarded and disappeared in apparent distress 6 miles east of here.

Later two additional U-boats appeared. One of them, objective of a rebel seaplane, submerger immediately. It appeared in difficulty, bathers on the eastern shore said.

Louis Francis, Gibraltar resident, who watched the second encounter said one bomb struck the submarine near its periscope and he believed it heavily damaged.

The accompanying boat shelled the plane, but did no harm, and the rebel plane sped back toward Ceuta, Morocco. The submarine dashed for Estepona.

Hundreds Look On.

Hundreds of residents watched bombardment of the C-3 and saw it vanish. Projectiles exploded close by the 8-year-old vessel. In apparent distress it disappeared suddenly from the surface of the water.

Tonight it had not been reported. However, if not seriously crippled, it had a diving range of 45 fathoms and could remain submerged for a number of hours.

"We are certain from the way the submarine submerged that she was lost," two lighthouse keepers asserted. "We saw the submarine about six miles south of Europa Point Lighthouse."

A Spanish flying boat was coming from Algeciras, flying to Ceuta, Spanish Morocco.

"It sighted the submarine, turned and flew over it at a height of about 2,000 feet. Then it dropped bombs which we saw explode within 30 feet of the vessel.

"The submarine immediately disappeared under the surface. The flying boat then circled the vicinity where the submarine sank, coming within 30 yards of the sea, and finally flew on to Ceuta."

Another loyal under-sea craft, the C-4, was reported putting in to Tangier for repairs as result of damage suffered in a bombardment yesterday.

Sandino warned against extensive bombing of rebel positions from the air until sufficient forces had been massed for an infantry assault.

Distribution of supplies and ammunition was a major problem.

The Barcelona air force was strengthened with arrival of a pilot who escaped from Palma, Majorca, capital of the Balearic Islands. He confirmed reports that rebels hold the islands but all was quiet. Severe punishment was threatened for persons found in possession of Madrid newspapers, which were dropped in the Balearics by Loyal aviators.

Zaragoza Battle Near.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Barcelona, Spain, July 29.—A formidable fleet of Loyalist airplanes was poised here today ready to rain death and destruction on Zaragoza, major rebel stronghold, when several columns of popular front forces complete preparations for a simultaneous infantry assault.

The strength of the Zaragoza rebels and the size of the government army being massed against them indicated the battle of Zaragoza would be among the most important of the Spanish civil war.

Plans for the assault were considered in detail when Gen. Sandino, commanding Loyal Catalan air forces, visited Louis Companys, president of the Barcelona Generalidad.

France Halts Planes.

Paris, July 29 (AP).—Two squadrons of planes, one French, the other British, were grounded at French airports tonight, while Leon Blum's popular front government debated whether to permit them to proceed to Spain.

Seventeen French planes, built in 1929 and traded in to manufacurers for new ships, stood at Etampes Airport, awaiting export licenses from Paris before being flown to government authorities in Madrid.

Four British airliners were held at Bordeaux, while Paris authorities sought to "verify their papers" after reports had been heard in aviation circles they were destined for Spanish rebel use.

RFC May Buy Federal Unit's Issue of Notes

Unsold Portion of Recent $150,000,000 Block May Be Acquired.

By the Associated Press.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials yesterday considered buying an unsubscribed portion of a $150,000,000 note issue offered to the investing public two weeks ago by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The notes, to mature in six months at 1½ per cent interest, are backed by cotton and grain in warehouses acquired by the corporation as collateral for its loan to farmers.

The Community Credit Corporation in the past has drawn its funds from the RFC, and the offer of a loan to the public was an innovation.

Beyond confirming that the entire issue had not been sold, officials yesterday declined to comment.

The episode recalled an unsuccessful effort two years ago to market a $100,000,000 issue of Farm Credit Administration bonds. The public responded to the extent of about $85,000,000 and the Treasury finally took the rest.

The FCA bonds bore the full guarantee of the Government both as to principal and interest. The Commodity Credit Corporatoin notes, however, carry no guarantee except insofar as one may be implied in that the credit corporation is an agency of the Government.

The credit corporation offered its notes to the money market at straight par value, plus interest.

While the interest rate is above that paid in short-term Government borrowing, it is below the prevailing commercial money rates for equivalent transactions.

In an effort to make the notes move, the RFC a few days ago circularized the natoinal banks.

Queen Mary Sails With Capacity List

New York, July 29 (AP).—The liner Queen Mary sailed homeward shortly after 3 p. m. with a capacity load of passengers numbering nearly 2,000.

There was no evidence from her officers or her line that she intended trying for a record run.

Art Jarrett, husband of the swimmer, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, recently barred from the Olympics for drinking what the officials considered was too much champagne, came aboard late, on the way to meet his wife and accompany her back to this country.

In a cabin on a deck above was Moe Solinsky, a clothing man who had been reported about to marry Marta Rocafort, who likewise was reported being courted by the Count of Covadonga, son of the former King of Spain.

Solinsky said he had no intention of marrying.

Maryland Woman Hurt In Kansas Is Improved

Salina, Kans., July 29 (AP).—The condition of Mrs. Blanche W. Mackenzie, of Chevy Chase, Md., injured in an auto accident yesterday, was reported "satisfactory" today by physicians.

Mrs. Mackenzie suffered concussion of the brain, broken ribs, a broken arm and bruises.

Epidemic Under Control.

Kanakanak, Alaska, July 29 (AP).—The typhoid epidemic appeared well under control today in this area, with the quarantine lifted to permit 300 Pacific-American Fisheries Co. employes to leave Friday.

A native child died today at the hospital, bringing to four the total deaths here. No new cases were reported.

Rescue Plans For Americans Given Setback

By the Associated Press.

Rescue plans for Americans in Madrid were given a setback yesterday by the failure of the Diplomatic Corps to obtain immediate Spanish government guarantees for the safe passage of a special train to take them to safety on the seacoast.

The American Embassy reported to the State Department that the proposed evacuation, tentatively set for this morning was uncertain. Indications were given that it could not be undertaken before Friday, even if the desired protection was forthcoming.

Although Madrid was reported quiet yesterday, renewed official anxiety arose here for the safety of approximately 300 American nationals now believed to be in the Spanish capital, the objective of rebel forces.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Cayuga, upon which Ambassador Claude G. Bowers has established a "floating embassy," was dispached, meanwhile, to the rescue of Americans in a potentially new danger spot near Spain's northern coast.

Concerned over reports from American Consul William W. Corcoran, at Vigo, that all communications had been cut off with Ovido, where many Americans live, the State Department ordered the Cayuga to proceed to Gijon, the nearest seaport, to investigate their plight.

61 Americans in District.

Ovido, the capital of the province of Asturias, is approximately 180 miles northeast of Vigo. Latest records placed the number of Americans in the Vigo consulate district at 61, most of whom were believed to be located in or near Ovido.

Corcoran began broadcasting by radio today that all Americans in Asturias could be evacuated by proceeding at once to Gijon, which is 15 miles from Ovido on the Bay of Biscay. Efforts also were being made to broadcast the same information from Bilbao to the eastward.

Ambassador Bowers advised the department by radio from the Cayuga that the cutter steamed out of St. Jean de Luz, France, at 10 a. m., Spanish time, today. The battleship Oklahoma was believed to be in the vicinity of Bilbao, whence she could steam to Gijon in a few hours if necessary.

Delayed diplomatic advices dispatched Tuesday night from Barcelona said that labor groups were reported to be taking control of factories there, but the State Department received no indication the plants operated there by the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corporation were affected.

U. S. Firms Watched.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference that some Americans with interests in Barcelona had called to his attention the threat confronting their property. He added that their plight was receiving sympathetic consideration, but that for the moment the State Department was devoting all of its attention to the question of the safety of American life in Spain.

The two American motor concerns were understood to have been among those that communicated with the Secretary.

Fears held several days for the welfare of a party of 12 boy and girl college students, headed by Mrs. Robert B. Owen, of Cambridge, Mass., meanwhile were quieted with word from the American consul at Bordeaux, France, that they had crossed the border on foot safely.

Island Conspiracy Defense Complete

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 29 (AP).—The defense rested tonight after calling 24 witnesses in about two hours in the second trial of eight Puerto Ricans charged with conspiracy to overthrow United States Government rule in the island.

Witnesses did little more than state their names and make other formal answers. Government objections to questions were sustained by the court almost without exception.

Judge Robert C. Cooper frequently warned Pedro Albizu Campos, chief defendant and defense attorney, "I cannot tell you how to conduct this case."

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock made the opening argument for the prosecution.

Albizu Campos told the jury that neither the defendant nor the National Party conspired to overthrow United States Government rule in Puerto Rico, recruit soldiers or incite rebellion against the authority of the United States.

Mother Giving Reception Today For President

Entertaining Old Friends From Campobello. Eastport.

By Dudley Harmon.

Minus the muttonchop whiskers, which he grew on his cruise along the coast of Nova Scotia to surprise his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, President Roosevelt has joined the latter and Mrs. Roosevelt at their summer home in Campobello. This afternoon Mrs. James Roosevelt, who also maintains a residence at the Canadian village, will entertain at a reception for old friends of her son from Campobello and Eastport.

During the President's cruise with his sons, James, Franklin, jr., and John, Mrs. Roosevelt has passed the time at her summer home entertaining various house guests, playing tennis with Miss Marian Dickerman, head of Todhunter School and one of her closest friends, shopping in the village nearby and writing her syndicated diary.

Among her guests are the Works Progress Administrator and Mrs. Harry Hopkins, Miss Malvina Scheider, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary, Miss Nancy Cook, her associate in the Val Kill furniture enterprise; Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., and Miss Emily Ingersoll, a friend of the latter.

The tiny village of Campobello has for two days been decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the President. Despite this elaborate preparation, however, his arrival in the Canadian town was entirely informal, except for a silent salute by a company of 40 Royal Canadian Mounted Police in dress uniform, who were drawn up in line at the private wharf of the Roosevelt estate.

After the reception this afternoon, the President will leave on an overnight trip to Quebec for a conference with Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general of Canada.

Lord Tweedsmuir, who was plain John Buchan before his title was conferred, is an author, statesman, lawyer and newspaperman. A student of American politics and life in this country, he has visited every battlefield of the Civil War. He hopes some day to write a book about Robert E. Lee, one of his heroes. He now is working on a life of Augustus Caesar, and another book, "39 Steps," was shown in movie form in Washington last winter.

Although he has served as governor general of Canada less than a year, Lord Tweedsmuir already has had 20 offers of honorary degrees from American universities. He has had to decline them, however, because of his office.

Mrs. Roosevelt will shortly go to Hyde Park, where the President will join her after a two-day motor trip through New England.

Washington Society Notes

A family party took place last evening at Tuxden, the Bethesda estate of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, in honor of Mrs. Tuckerman's birthday.

In the party were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Biays, the latter formerly Miss Elsie Tuckerman, and their two children, Walter R. Biays and Kathleen Sheridan Biays, who motored over from their home in Edgemoor; Miss Ruth Tuckerman, a debutante this season, and "Peggy," the schoolgirl daughter of the house, otherwise Miss Margaret Tuckerman. The only absentee is Miss Laura Tuckerman, who is visiting her cousin, Mrs. James Todd, on Long Island.

Mrs. Tuckerman is passing the summer at Tuxden this year, as she is chairman of the woman's Republican committee of Montgomery County, Md., and is touring the country, making speeches for Gov. Landon. At the end of August Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman and their daughter, Miss Alice Tuckerman, will be guests of Mrs. Henry F. Dimock at Bar Harbor.

Foremost among civic leaders of this vicinity are Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman and their daughters. The entire family is to be found actively working for every civic and philanthropic object of note.

One of Mrs. Tuckerman's constructive hobbies is her habit of keeping scrap books. They date back to the days when, a child in her teens, she kept a diary as Miss Edith Abercrombie Miller, the debutante daughter of a well-known family. Her scrap books comprise a contemporary history of Washington society and the events of the world for the period covered in them.

It was a Colonial Dames committee of which Mrs. Tuckerman was the leading spirit, which first became interested in the restoration of historic Wythe House in Williamsburg, Va., at the suggestion of Dr. A. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Burton Parish Church there. The Colonial Dames raised nearly $20,000 for this purpose, which has now been turned over to the Rockefeller Foundation as part of the general plan for the restoration of Williamsburg.

Mrs. Tuckerman wears the World War Order of Mercy presented to her for war work by the King of the Slavs, Croats and Slovenes, and the Medaille de la Reine Elizabeth, presented to her by the late King Albert of the Belgians, for her work for the Belgians during the World War.

83 Britons Here On Motor Trip Of United States

Among the party dining on the terrace were Mrs. Edward Craden and Miss Sheila Hopkins, wearing crisp white hats and gowns, who came in the same car with Mr. Joseph Edwards at the wheel; Mr. Brian Lewis, son of Lord Essenden; Mr. Carroll Dugdale, son of Lady Eva Dugdale; Mrs. Nancy Morgan, one of London's noted eye specialists; Miss Mary Flint, of Edinburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Symons, both of whom are well known as enthusiastic motorists; Mr. and Mrs. L. H. White, Maj. Douglas Morris, Mrs. H. Christian Jones, Miss H. Christian Jones and Mr. A. L. Logette.

A long black Rolls Royce brought Capt. Stuart Burt and his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Eric Burt, with Miss Sheila Carlisle and Mrs. Skinner. Coming to the hotel in advance of the main party, Mr. A. A. Pollard went directly to the pool for a plunge before supper on the terrace.

Niece Is Visited By Mrs. Pritchett

Mrs. Campbell Prichett will leave next week for Wilmington, N. C., to visit her niece, Mrs. Clifton Wharton Phillips. Mrs. Phillips, who was Miss Natalie Keeney before her marriage last fall, is summering in Wilmington with Mr. Phillips, whose family make their home in that town.

Mrs. Sydney Cloman, with whom Mrs. Prichett resides in Washington, is still in California, where she went last spring with Mrs. George Marye. They are now in San Francisco, after spending some time in the nearby mountains, and will return to Washington in October.

Mrs. Beth Fair Johnson and Miss Jeannette Cody, of Tulsa, Okla., are on an extended tour of the East and are stopping at the Dodge Arts Club to Meet.

Miss Amy Veerhoff will be the guest artist of the Arts Club this evening when she will give a group of readings. The Elizabeth Somers Glee Club, with Mary Burnett, director, and Kathryn Latimer, accompanist, also will be heard in a program of Shakespearean songs. Mrs. Gertrude Lyons and Miss Jean C. Stier will be hostesses for the dinner in the garden preceding the evening's program.

Mrs. Frank C. Letts, of Washington, accompanied by Miss Margaret Frazer of this city, is at the hotel New Weston in New York City.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My only brother, who is 30 years old, has had a rather difficult life, with not enough play or social activities. As a result he has some queer ideas. Since he was 15 years old he has worked with father in his shop during the day. At night, he acted as watchman. According to father, his friends were never the right sort. Mother always had some place she wanted him to take her. The movies were his one diversion; that and airplanes. Father never gave him a vacation and his Sundays were never his own. When the pay roll was short, he came out at the small end of the horn.

* * * *

Mother had a good friend, a widow of 55 or so, whose three children are grown and married. My brother used to take mother and this friend of hers to meetings. Mother's friend felt sorry for this good son, whose father frequently scolded him and whose mother sometimes found fault with him and nagged him. She took him into her home as a paying guest, giving him lodging and meals.

* * * *

He had a girl friend, 18 years old, with whom he had been going for several years. She had always objected to his interest in airplanes, but the widow encouraged this interest. As a result, the girl was left at home on Sundays, while he went forth with the widow on excursions to see planes, etc. Finally the girl talked to him and when he absolutely refused to give up his interest in airplanes, she married someone else. Now the widow, with the fried-chicken picnic basket and ever-ready-to-go methods has got my brother to a place where he thinks he should marry her.

* * * *

I will say for the widow that she has worked hard and put all of her children through school, has lived a good life, and everyone thinks her very nice. But I just can't bear to see her married to my brother. I think he deserves something better. Is there anything I can do to make him see reason? I have talked and talked to him, but the widow seems to have a real hold on him. Father promised to send him away, but hasn't done so. I will thank you for your help and a prompt answer. (The only psychoanalyst I know is out of town until September 1.)

ANXIOUS.

Let Him Alone.

DEAR ANXIOUS: I am not convinced that your brother could do better than marry this 55-year-old widow who is, apparently, the first person in his whole experience to give him that sympathy, encouragement, respect and companionship which every human being craves from the cradle upward. It seems obvious that your whole objection to the match is based on the difference in their ages. Yet I cannot see that that difference matters greatly, if they have demonstrated their ability to get along happily together.

I do not see that this is necessarily a case for a psychiatrist or a psychoanalyst. However queer your brother's ideas may seem to be to you or to his parents, remember that they have become more or less fixed ideas by this time, and in view of the widow's great kindness to him, I do not see anything so abnormal in his having decided that he would be very happily married to her. Nor is there anything queer in his having a passion for airplanes. Some psychologists, as a matter of fact, have advanced the theory that the person with a passion for airplanes is a person who is seeking to gain ascendancy over a pronounced inferiority complex. And it is rather to be expected that your brother would have an inferiority complex, and would be seeking to compensate for it in some manner, after having led the life you describe him as living the past 30 years—held down by both his parents to the status of little boy.

* * * *

I should say he is making a rather fair best of a pretty bad bargain which life has dished out to him. At least, he had the intestinal fortitude to stick to his airplanes rather than consent to letting his 18-year-old erstwhile sweetheart be the third person in life to lead him around by the nose, telling him what was good for him and what was not. He may even be regarded as rather fortunate in having stumbled upon a woman of whatever age who has the generosity and good sense to approve his ideas and his way of doing things for a change.

* * * *

If he marries the widow, he may find himself in years to come not so happy with her as he had anticipated, but in the meantime he may have found himself; he may have learned to take the reins in his own hands so far as making important decisions affecting his own life are concerned; and he may have been so sufficiently made to feel that he is lord and master of his own domain that his inferiority complex will have entirely faded away. Marrying the widow may do him a great deal more good than any amount of expensive sittings with a psychiatrist or psychoanalyst, in other words.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Reconstructing the Face.

If one will peruse the writings of an old Italian surgeon, Taliacozzi, published in Venice in 1597, or will read the account of the remarkable Hindu nose rebuilding procedures that appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine in 1794, a fair idea may be obtained of the rather remarkable success of facial reconstruction that has been practiced for centuries.

Today the automobile is the greatest factor in producing deformities of the face. Boxing, wrestling, football, basketball, and other forms of sport may also cause torn facial structures, cauliflower ears and extensive scarring that requires repair.

The possibilities of plastic surgery are very great. Skin grafting, which has been known for generations, is the basis for most of this work, as bits of skin from other parts of the body will grow if transplanted under proper precautions to raw surfaces. Eyebrows can be replaced, and lips, jaws and ears remade. A deformed nose (usually the result of an injury) can, in skilled hands, be reshaped. There are, of course, minor cosmetic defects, some of which are responsible for the development of personality complexes or depressions, which are readily relieved by some simple surgical operation.

Sir Harold Gillies calls the repair of facial deformities the Cinderella of surgery. Out of the carnage of 1914-1918 came thousands of men with some part of the face missing, many of the injuries resulting in the loss of sizable segments of bone. Some of these healed in such a manner that chewing was impossible. Furthermore, the deformity was little short of horrible. Through the resources of plastic surgery it was found that bone grafts could be introduced and the normal shape of the jaw restored.

Again, the terrible effects of burns with extensive contracting scars yield to skin grafting and the restoration of functional activity. But a few days ago I saw a lad of 7 who had been seriously burned about the legs while playing near a bonfire. A year ago his lower right leg had been drawn backward and upward so that it was practically useless and amputation had been advised. Through months of work on the part of a highly trained expert, scars had been removed and replaced by new skin, and the chap was playing about the ward as actively as though the accident had not occurred.

Probably no phase of surgical advance has been more exploited by the incompetent and the quacks. Some years ago there was a great vogue for injecting paraffin under the skin to round out facial contours and remove wrinkles. It was soon learned that the paraffin was likely to become lumpy or to cause irritation of the tissues and, eventually, their destruction. While the effect for a time was fairly satisfactory, in the long run the result was a grotesque caricature. It is this paraffin injection method which has been utilized by many self-styled plastic surgeons. It must be emphasized that this special branch of surgery requires the highest skill and that years of training are required on the part of the one who essays to do the job.

Defends Nonpartisan Politics

MISS ANNA LORD STRAUSS.

Nonpartisan Role for Women Upheld by Miss Anna Strauss

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"WOMEN can never become a strong force in politics until they quit wasting their time working with nonpartisan groups."

This criticism, so often heard, in effect, at both the Republican and the Democratic conventions, was patently aimed at the National League of Women Voters, one of the strongest nonpartisan groups in the country. Yet Miss Anna Lord Strauss, second vice president of this organization, is convinced that what the league has thus far accomplished is defense enough for its existence.

She said as much yesterday at her desk at league headquarters where she has been in charge during the vacation of Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, first vice president.

Miss Strauss pointed out, also, that from what she has observed "there is no indication that women for any reason are failing to strengthen their position in politics. Certainly, we have a much more important place in both major parties than we had four years ago," she said. "And since woman's progress is always slow in any field where men are concerned, the fact that we have advanced at all is proof enough our activity in nonpartisan organizations has been all to the good."

She stressed that while the League of Women Voters is not aligned with any party, it nevertheless provides a medium for training in citizenship that will be of value both to the member and to the party of her choice. "Furthermore, it provides channels of information on national problems that should be open to any voter. Perhaps an ideal government would be more nearly a reality if there were a League of Men Voters."

She is convinced that blind party devotion is more likely to be characteristic of men than of women. "From what I have observed, it seems the more intelligent feminine voters are far more concerned with working for good givernment than for partisan programs."

This concern has manifested itself in the campaign for improvement of personnel in Government service, a campaign issue of the League of Women Voters. "While progress in this regard has been slow, we are not discouraged," she said. "The day will certainly come when we find the man for the job, not the job for the man."

Active in the League of Women Voters of New York for a number of years, Miss Strauss has held a number of important positions. She has been chairman of the women in industry committee of the Manhattan Borough League of Women Voters, and at the same time served as a consumer representative on the NRA Compliance Board in New York. Subsequently, she was consumer chairman of the Economic Welfare Department of the New York State League and secretary of the National League.

But active as she has been in the league, Miss Strauss has many other interests. Professionally an editor, she was for six years with the Century Magazine. She also holds a prominent place in sportswomen's circles in New York and is regarded as a squash, tennis, sailing and skating expert.

One of her most absorbing interests, however, has long been the raising of woman's status in public life, which it seems is exactly what would be expected of the great-granddaughter of Lucretia Mott, whose work in behalf of women earned her recognition, along with Lucy Stone, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, as one of the "four giants of the woman suffrage movement."

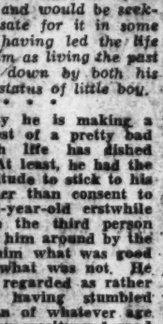
New Canning Ideas

A NEW PICKLE or relish makes a feast of the plainest meal!

Fruit-stuffed peach mangoes and Peter Piper, a bright red sweet pepper pickle, are two delicious novelties. For the mangoes, pit 50 peaches, after cutting wedge from side (see sketch). Fill pit cavity with mixture of pulp of 10 peaches passed through coarse sieve, and ¼ cup each of chopped, candied ginger, citron, lemon peel, orange peel.



Fasten wedge back in with toothpick and stick in cloves. Make pickling solution of 1 quart vinegar, 4 pounds sugar, 2 inches stick cinnamon, 2 tablespoons mixed pickling spices tied in cheese-cloth. Boil 10 minutes, let peaches stand in it overnight; next day, put them in jars, pour boiling solution over them, and seal.

Now for Peter Piper: Seed and clean 2 dozen red sweet peppers and soak overnight in brine. Scald, put through food chopper with coarse knife. Simmer one-half hour in pickling solution of 1 quart vinegar, 6 cups sugar, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 blade mace, 3 inches stick cinnamon, 1 tablespoon allspice, small piece ginger root, 1 tablespoon mustard seed (tie spices in cheese-cloth). Strain, turn peppers into sterilized jars, boil solution until thick, pour in jars and seal.

And Call It Accident

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

AS THEY were coming downstairs: "There isn't very much left to see," said Troutbeck in a dubious tone. "Only the great hall and the king's chamber. Then there are the two rooms which Capt. and Mrs. Trefane kept for themselves. It's all straight-forward! no one could have hurt themselves there, but I suppose we's best go everywhere and see everything?"

"Certainly," said Lord John firmly.

And then they saw with astonishment, and some disgust, that there were the remains of breakfast on a table in the further window. Also a used coffee cup.

"The captain must have left in a considerable hurry, I judge. And as for Miss Starling, she never would have gone away without washing up those things!" exclaimed Troutbeck. "At least that's my judgment of the young lady."

Suddenly George Dwight said: "D'you hear something?"

"I don't hear anything," said Troutbeck at last.

But Lord John had heard something—a curious, low, whimpering sound.

He opened wide the door giving into what he always thought of as the King's chamber, and then he gave a cry of surprise and horror, for in the center of the floor of that delicately charming room yawned a wide round hole, and it was from that hole that there issued that plaintive whimpering sound.

"My God, Troutbeck! Some vile brute has thrown an animal down there."

George Dwight meanwhile had thrown himself on the floor and was peering into the dark cavernous depth. He could see nothing, but after a few moments: "It's a human being!" he exclaimed.

"It's Ruth Starling!" 'cried George Dwight suddenly, in an extremity of horror, pain and rage.

"She's down there! I see her! Darling—darling Ruth," he shouted, "I'm coming down to get you——"

Troutbeck said in a quiet, firm tone, "You stay right here, Mr. Dwight, while his lordship and I get a ladder. I'm sure she heard you. That's why she's saving her breath. She knows she's all right now."

"Yes, my lord," and again Troutbeck's voice was quiet, firm, reassuring. "Her fall must have been broken by 3 or 4 feet of spring water that's there now. If we hadn't had such a dry spring and summer, she'd have been drowned."

"Who could have prepared that devilish trap?" he asked the question as if of himself.

"I don't think there can be much doubt as to who prepared it," answered the Yorkshireman. "I've long believed the captain has what's called a mad streak in him."

"We may never learn what made him do it. But I shall always believe he had a motive," said Philip Trefane's cousin.

To the man waiting for them, it seemed aeons of time, but it was really only a few minutes before the two came back carrying a ladder and a coil of rope.

It was George Dwight who went down the ladder, uncoiling the rope as he went; and it was he who slowly brought up Ruth Starling in his arms back to light and life.

When left alone with Ruth, John Pendervil drew together the curtains of the window, and in the semidarkness he knelt down and took her icy hands in his.

She whispered faintly, "I want to tell you what happened, John. But I don't want any one else to know, ever."

"Don't say anything now, dearest——"

"I'd rather say it now, John."

"How did you come to fall in there?"

"He asked me if I would like to see Iris' room, and I said 'yes,' and he opened the door over there," and taking her right hand from his warm clasp, she pointed with a wraith-like finger. "Then I suppose he beckoned to me, for I started to come across this room, and when I stepped on the rug which was there——"

She went on, painfully, "I know now that he always wanted me to die—I know it, yet I can't guess the reason. I've thought and thought during the days I've been down there, in that pit, standing in the water. I used to wonder if he was up there, gloating over the thought of what I was enduring, for he hated me, I know that, too, now."

She shut her eyes. "I suppose I was down there a week, or was it longer, John? I used to long for the spring water to come in quickly and drown me. But it came in drop by drop." And then she asked, "Can you guess why he wished me to die?"

He shook his head. "Troutbeck says he has a streak of madness, and I think Troutbeck is right."

"No one must ever know," she murmured, "because of Iris. But John?"

"Yes?" he whispered back, and then he put his arm around her wet, shivering form.

"I don't want ever to see him again," she said feebly.

"You never shall."

There came a stir outside in the hall, and as the door opened on the darkened room, Lord John called out sharply, "Take care—or there'll be another accident!"

He saw his mother's elderly maid, Miss Scrutt, edge her way round to the couch. "I think your lordship had best keep every one away till the doctor comes. He'll be here in a few minutes——"

It was late that evening when once more Philip and Iris were going up to their room as they had done the night before. And, as had also happened the night before, the telephone bell rang, but this time it was Iris who exclaimed: "I will go down and answer it, for you look tired out, my poor boy. I suppose it's only that tiresome American getting through again. I'm beginning to feel as if I didn't care what has happened to poor Ruth!"

"Neither do I," he said savagely.

She was away some time, but at last he heard her coming up the stairs very, very slowly, almost indeed as if she had suddenly become an old woman.

When she opened their bedroom door he went to meet her, but putting out her hand as if to fend him off, she stood framed in that commonplace doorway, looking like horror and dark tragedy turned into a woman.

"They have found Ruth," she said tonelessly.

The Federal Diary

Registered U. S. Patent Office

By Betty Read

Jungles and unknown ancient cities were all in a day's work for Dr. Duncan Strong of the Smithsonian Institution for the past six months, but he now is back in twentieth century civilization after dipping into the life of the beginnings of the Christian era.

Dr. Strong returned to Washington recently from a joint expedition of the Smithsonian and the Peabody Museum of Harvard University into Honduras, where they were doing archeological research into the Mayan civilization remains.

On the fourth floor of the Institution—and the elevator was not running when we visited him—Dr. Strong is beginning a year's work which will be required to analyze and evaluate the work of six months digging in the tropics. Reports of the work will be published shortly.

One of the features of the expedition which will interest Washingtonians, aside from its scientific and historical aspect, is that it was sponsored in part by Dr. Wilson Popenoe, who was associated for many years with the United States Department of Agriculture before he left to work with the United Fruit Co. Dr. Popenoe and his firm and the Honduras government cooperated to make the way easy for the expedition into that southern world.

Dr. Popenoe was particularly interested in the work, as it was a continuation of that begun before her death by his wife, Dorothy H. Popenoe, well known to archeologists for her discoveries of an American civilization earlier than that of the Mayas and their Indian relatives.

"The expedition might well be classed as one of intellectual curiosity," said Dr. Strong. "Both American continents comprise a huge laboratory to study the development of a race and a civilization which grew to a high degree absolutely independent of those of Europe or Asia.

"We want to know about the early people who inhabited this part of the world and it is a fascinating study when you realize that the Indians were a most cultured race and that a large number of the things the world now uses every day can be traced directly to their discoveries."

For instance, were it not for those early men who migrated across the Berin Straits from Asia, we would not know the trusty potato, tobacco, corn, squash, turkeys, cranberries and many other things. Quinine and rubber were discovered by those early settlers and their ways of living were so colorful, artistic and luxurious that they make some of our twentieth century cities seem dull and commonplace.

The Mayan calendar was more accurate than our own, Dr. Strong said, and this and other features of their lives have been discovered through excavations during the past 80 years. However, the interest has quickened greatly during the past 20 years and, while there is much yet to be excavated and learned, the fundamentals of the civilization that astounded the Spaniards when they conquered Mexico, has been discovered.

"Without this work, we cannot evaluate our original American peoples," he said, "in the Western plains of our own country, scientists are now working to find out more about the Folsom man, who represents the earliest hunting people who came here. At the same time we were working at the other end of the range on the highest developments of those early days.

Dr. Strong said they were fortunate enough to find an ideal site for work as it revealed not only the decorative work of the later Mayan period, but in the strata of earth beneath that, they found evidences of an older and more simple life. They judge the period of their findings largely by the elaborateness of the workmanship on the pottery pieces and the depth at which it is unearthed. For the earlier relics they had to dig about 20 feet—a distance that meant they had uncovered two layers of civilization.

Dr. Strong has been with the Smithsonian about five years and before that was professor of anthropology at the University of Nebraska. He worked for some time in the Field Museum in Chicago and took his professional training at the University of California.

His various expeditions have taken him to far corners of the earth. He has been in Labrador tracing the early history of the Americas and in other spots of the two continents.

Miss Pauline Hobbs, of the AAA disbursing office, calls in great distress to say that she lost a much prized ring last Tuesday. It was a Goucher College seal ring, given to her by her mother at the time of her graduation.

Glavis' place has been filled by Angelo R. Clas, who keeps his $10,000-a-year salary as he moves into his new job. Clas is an architect and has designed or passed upon the construction plans of all PWA projects, and in his new capacity will have charge of investigating the things on which he formerly worked as creator.

Howard A. Gray has been moved from director of inspection to director of housing and Capt. Jabez G. Gholston, formerly director of the engineering division, takes on the job of director of inspection. Gholston's assistant in his old job, Arthur J. Bulger, now heads the engineering division.

C. W. Fitch, the assistant director of housing, resigned to take a job in New York with the National Broadcasting Co., and his job is yet to be filled, as is that of James W. Cramer, formerly chief of branch 2 of the housing division, who now is working as Clas' assistant.

That makes a lot of new bosses for the employes to get used to, but officials of the housing division say the moves were made in preparation of the new $300,000,000 program which is getting under way.

Clew Sought Here in Co-ed Hotel Slaying

Two Asheville Detectives on Way to District; Bring 'Bundle.'

May Seek Federal Aid; Capital Residents Were at Inn.

Search for clews which may lead to the murderer of Helen Clevenger, 18-year-old honor student at New York University, who was mutilated and shot to death in her room at the fashionable Battery Park Hotel, in Asheville, N. C., 13 days ago, shifted to Washington last night.

On their way here to question several persons who might know something of the most brutal slaying in the history of the Blue Ridge Mountain resort city were Asheville Detectives Robert Patton and James Dayton, who were expected to arrive in the Capital early today.

The nature of their "lead" was not disclosed, but it was believed they would interview perhaps five residents of the city, four of whom were guests at the hotel the night of July 16, when the blonde co-ed was killed.

It also was pointed out, from sources close to Sheriff Laurence E. Brown, of Buncombe County, N. C., who thus far has directed the hunt for the killer, that they would seek aid from the crime laboratories of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

When the pair left Asheville yesterday they carried a mysterious bundle which was believed to contain specimens picked up in the hotel room where the pretty girl was assaulted and murdered.

Mysterious Package.

Federal agents here refused to comment on this angle of the case.

Shortly after Miss Clevenger's body was found, Washington police were asked to check up on a man whose name was found in her address book, and who makes his home here.

Later, through the Detective Bureau, they announced they had submitted a report to Asheville authorities, but Sheriff Brown late yesterday did not disclose if this was the clew upon which his two men, en route to this city, were following up.

The other four people who may be questioned by the officers merely had registered at the hotel from Washington at the time of the killing.

Meanwhile Sheriff Brown renewed his prediction that the mystery would be solved.

"We are still going to solve this case," he said. "It's going to be a very difficult job, and it may take a long time."

The officer blamed much of his difficulty on the fact that his office was not notified until almost two hours after the pajama-clad body of the 18-year-old Staten Island college girl was found shot and beaten to death in her Battery Park hotel room here the morning of July 16.

Meanwhile, one prisoner remained in the Buncombe County Jail in connection with the case. He is Daniel H. Gaddy, the 28-year-old night watchman at the hotel.

Sheriff Laurence E. Brown reiterated he did not believe Gaddy has any direct connection with the crime, but added:

"He's holding something back. He's the key to this whole mystery. When he talks, we'll know something."

Since the slaying, seven persons have been retained "for investigation." Six have been released. After a week's detention, L. D. Roddy, Negro elevator operator, was freed yesterday.

From statements of persons in or near the hotel the night of the murder, authorities have this composite picture of the attacker-slayer:

He is young, well-educated, soft-voiced, athletic, about 6 feet tall, weighs 160 to 170 pounds and knows the layout of the hotel well.

At least seven guests heard a woman's screams at 1 a. m. One heard a voice in Miss Clevenger's room: "Just a minute, and you'll be all right."

Another, Mrs. Nettie M. Cowdin, of Somerville, Mass., who had a room adjoining Miss Clevenger's, said she heard both "horrible screams" and a dull noise like a muffled gun.

"After that," she said, "I never heard a sound. I listened for a long time—for an hour or more.

Did Not Hear Elevator.

"I never heard the elevator move. I was listening especially for that."

Mrs. Cowdin said the screams sounded like "a cry of horror." The only words she could distinguish, she said, were, "Oh, mother, oh—"

E. B. Pittman, of Raleigh, who had a room opposite the girl's, went into the hall and saw a shadowy form standing half in the doorway of Miss Clevenger's room.

When Pittman asked about the screams, the man in the shadows said calmly, "I was wondering, too."

Besides Pittman, two other persons saw the man supposed to be the murderer.

A Negro bellboy saw a man dart across the hotel mezzanine at 1 a. m. Casey Jones, a taxi driver, saw apparently the same man vault a 10-foot balustrade to the sidewalk and rush away.

Evelyn Moss, a Negro chambermaid, who makes a round of the hotel every morning to tell which rooms are occupied, said Miss Clevenger's room was locked from the inside at 8:20 a. m.

Prof. Clevenger, who found the body at 8:30 a. m., said the door to his niece's room was unlocked.

Boy Hurt While Diving.

Herbert Lister, 14, of 2348 Twenty-seventh street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital yesterday for cuts on his head suffered when he struck bottom after a dive into the shallow end of the Shoreham Hotel swimming pool. He was pulled out by a guard at the pool. After treatment at the hospital he was allowed to go home.

Existence of Black Lightning Is Denied by Scientist-Priest

Overexposure Blamed for Streaks in Thunderbolt Picture.

Another explanation of the "black lightning" photographed during the storm Monday night by Arthur Ellis, a member of The Post staff, was offered yesterday by the Rev. Ignatius Gottfried, S. M., who during his 73 years has been an amateur magician, a chemist, a superintendent of an observatory and a photographer on a New Zealand newspaper.

Sitting in his workshop in the basement of the Marist Seminary in Brookland yesterday, Father Gottfried scouted the Weather Bureau's theory that the black lightning flashes were due to a mysterious light wave reaction. The first explanation of the phenomena, he said, was published in an English periodical, "The Photogram," about 40 years ago.

"There is no such thing as black lightning," he declared. "The black streaks in the picture were caused by an overexposure."

"It happens this way. The black streak was the first lightning flash. The other flashes in the picture came almost instantaneously after the first and their diffused light overexposed the first bolt.

Known as "Reversal."

"Your photographer had his camera set up, waiting for the lightning. The first bolt came, but before he could close the shutter, the other flashes had registered on the plate.

"The same thing occurs when you try to take a picture of a landscape, showing the sun. The intense light of the sun completely destroys the sensitivity of the film, making the negative transparent in that spot and making the print show black instead of white. This phenomenom is called 'reversal.'

"Sometimes a photograph of lightning appears in the print as if it had a black core. This is where overexposure and the consequent process of reversal is just beginning to take place."

Father Gottfried's explanation of the phenomenom agrees substantially with that given by Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. Dr. Abbot said the black streak was simply a flash of too intense brilliance for the camera.

Born in England.

Father Gottfried always has been interested in mechanics. Born in England, he says he was taking clocks to pieces and putting them back together at the age of 9.

He graduated from this pastime to become an assistant to a watchmaker. That was during his vacations from college.

The watchmaker, he said, took more interest in a perpetual motion machine than he took in timepieces, but he taught Father Gottfried the use of tools.

After he left college Father Gottfried went to work for an electric company, making instruments. Then he went to New Zealand.

In New Zealand, he worked as a machinist and technician, taking up photography as a sideline. With his knowledge of mechanics and chemistry he soon developed a process which permitted better reproduction of photographs in newspapers.

He was hired by the Christ Church (N. Z.) Press and put to work developing new methods and taking pictures. He also executed fashion drawings for the paper, his father, an artist, having taught him to draw.

Then, at the age of 42, he went back to school to study for the priesthood. While studying he worked in the Meeanee Observatory in New Zealand, taking daily photographs of the sun.

Recently, Father Gottfried celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary with the Marist Order. He is now retired, but formerly taught chemistry and mathematics.

He was at one time a member of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, having taken up magic as another hobby.

Father Gottfried now spends his time working in the little workship on the ground floor of the seminary. He has equipped the shop himself and has made most of his own tools.

Exhibits His Inventions.

"This is a screwdriver-handle," he said, "I made this to suit the American taste."

Then he opened another box to show a number of safety razors. He picked one up.

"It floats," he said, and explained that he made the implements with hollow celluloid handles, boring out the inside with a drill.

Father Gottfried also spends considerable time repairing clocks, but not all of it working with tools. He is re-reading several books, one of them "Chemistry in Medicine."

The man who speaks four languages, has lived in more than a dozen countries and has been everything from a machinist to a preacher of the Gospel, sighed.

"I've had a pretty full life," he said.

Writ Prevents Seizure of 40 Claw Machines

Court Grants Injunction Until Decision Can Be Reached at Hearing.

Carrying out his announced intention of granting Mrs. Freda Boosalis, owner of 40 claw machines, a temporary injunction restraining the members of the Police Department and United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett from seizing or confiscating the machines, Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in District Court, yesterday signed an order forbidding the seizure of the machines until a complete hearing in October.

Mrs. Boosalis sought the injunction after operators of pin ball machines had been successful in their fight to prevent confication of their machines during the summer months.

She said that the 40 machines she owned would be either seized or put out of order unless the court intervenes and restrained the police until such time as she had an opportunity to prove they were in fact games of skill and not games of chance.

Justice Luhring, who heard both requests for temporary injunctions, announced that he was, for the time being, tying the hands of the police so that a full hearing on the merits could be had in the fall term of court. He made it plain that he was not now attempting to pass on the permanent injunction requested by the owners of the machines. That problem, he said, would have to be threshed out later. Meantime, he advanced both cases for an early hearnig in October.

Pickets Withdraw From Power Office

The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians announced yesterday that pickets have been withdrawn from the offices of the Federal Power Commission because the commission has agreed to an impartial investigation of the dismissal of Robert Durand, who the federation contends was discharged because of union activities.

The federation claimed it was unable to make any progress for a hearing on the case until the return of the commission chairman, Frank R. McNinch, to the city a few days ago.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America and chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, said in reference to the Durand case:

"I hope, in the interest of fair play and peaceful settlement of disputes of this kind, that the Federal Power Commission will give serious consideration to the latest proposal of the technicians' union and agree to the creation of an arbitration board to settle this question. * * * Needless to say, I am opposed to dismissals of employes because of their union activities."

South Carolina Club Plans Meeting Tonight

A meeting of the National Democratic Club of South Carolina will be held tonight at 8:30 p. m. in the assembly room of the Central Y. M. C. A. Edward P. Hodges, an assistant to the Attorney General, will speak.

A program of entertainment has been arranged by the clubs' president, Dillard C. Rogers, and Brooks C. Preacher, chairman of the membership committee.

Girl Scouts Bring Robin Hood And Merry Men to Life Again

Robin Hood and his merry men came to life again yesterday, with Girl Scouts of Camp Blair portraying the familiar roles beneath the tall trees at Blair Recreation Center. The play was one of the closing activities of the stay-at-home camp conducted on Wednesday and Thursday for the last six weeks. The final session will be today.

Hattie Crockett had the part of Robin Hood. Others in the cast were Nancy Giffen, Maid Marian; Yvonne Werner, Sir Guy; Virginia Taylor, Friar Tuck; Enola Marshall, the fool; Betty Ann Crockett, the archer, and Margaret Russell, Dorothy Randlett, Lydia Ewing and Ruth Viereck, Robin Hood's men.

An audience of 50 mothers watched the performance, which was concluded just as the afternoon rain began. Earlier in the day the Scouts had a display of crafts, rock finds and tree books.

Today's closing session will include an archery tournament, tennis matches and a skit produced by the older girls.

Attendance at the stay-at-home camp has ranged from 80 to 120 girls daily. Mrs. Joseph Kurs has directed the project. Mrs. Charlotte B. Beers directed the production of Robin Hood.

Jury Releases Autoists Held In 2 Deaths

Traffic Tickets First Annoy Court, Then Swamp Police.

Two motorists were exonerated from blame yesterday after a coroner's jury investigated the traffic deaths of John E. Tyne, jr., 23, of 505 Madison street northwest, and Miss Jessica R. Smith, 60, of 1701 K street northwest.

Joseph Sheppard, 40, of 1639 Hobart street northwest, was released from further prosecution when the jury found the death of Tyne accidental.

Driver Released.

In the second inquest, Sidney Jefferson, colored, 36, of 922 Barry place northwest, was released in the death of Miss Smith, daughter of the designer of the Confederate flag.

Miss Smith died in Emergency Hospital Sunday after she was struck at Sixteenth and I streets northwest.

Testimony revealed the woman, who was crossing the street, ran in front of a car in the outside lane of traffic and into the path of Jefferson's vehicle in the inside lane. Witnesses said Jefferson did not have a chance to stop.

Tickets Tie Up Court.

Traffic tickets seem to cause both policemen and Police Court attaches as much trouble as they do guilty citizens who park their cars overtime or in a "restricted zone."

In fact, the time seems ripe, in view of yesterday's developments in the traffic ticket warrant situation, for a residents' movement toward doing away with the use of the things.

It was revealed in The Post of yesterday that requests for warrants from policemen were so numerous that Police Court Judge John P. McMahon had ordered eight bailiffs to assist Warrant Clerk R. B. Gott in making them out.

With the eight at work since July 15 the situation now is: Policemen who were swamping the warrant officer with requests for warrants now find themselves swamped with warrants.

Gott said 2,923 warrants have been issued since July 15. He added, "The number returned does not warrant (his pun) all the work that must be done to issue them. It is evident that the papers are not being served."

And who wants an unwarranted warrant?

Contest Judges Named.

The list of judges for the national contest to select the representative safe driver in each of the 48 States and the District of Columbia looks as if the names might have been lifted from the pages of Who's Who in America.

In every section of the country, declared the American Automobile Association, co-sponsors of the contest with the C. I. T. Safety Foundation, outstanding public officials, civic leaders, editors and heads of women's organizations will pick the State winners in the country's most unique safety movement.

Included in the roster of State judges, said the national motoring body, are: Gov. Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota; Gov. Tom Berry of South Dakota; Charles W. Bryan, former Governor of Nebraska, now mayor of Lincoln; Mrs. W. D. James, president, California Federation of Women's Clubs; Lieut. Col. Paul G. Kirk, Massachusetts commissioner of public safety; William H. Vanderbilt, of Rhode Island; Prof. Charles J. Tilden, of Yale University; Charles A. Harnett, New York's commissioner of motor vehicles, and Maj. John A. Warner, superintendent of State police; Gen. Milton R. McLean, adjutant general of Kansas; Walter Williams, chief of State police, Illinois; Clark Howell, noted Georgia publisher; Earl Snell, Oregon's secretary of state; and hundreds of other prominent Americans.

U. S. Agents Hunt Chiefs Of Gant-Hunt Gang

The Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday issued 250,000 circulars describing Hugh Gant and Alva Dewey Hunt, leaders of the notorious Gant-Hunt gang, of Florida.

The Government agents particularly want the pair for robbery of a bank at Cross City, Fla. The bank was insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Co., and its robbery was a Federal offense.

WPA Approves $590,000 Job At Bolling Field

Emergency $75,000 Fund Is Alloted to Keep 1,150 Workers.

Continuance of work on the Army's new airport at Bolling Field seemed virtually asured yesterday when it was learned that the Works Progress Administration had tentatively approved a $590,000 project for the completion of the new flying field.

The project, which was requested by Army engineers several months ago, has still to be certified by the President, the Bureau of the Budget and the Comptroller General's office. WPA officials, however, said they expected no difficulties to arise.

Pending final approval of the project, the WPA has made available an emergency allotment of $75,000 to the quartermaster general to keep the 1,150 men employed on the field at work. This allotment was made after Army officers had warned the WPA that they would have to dismiss almost half of the workers unless additional funds were provided.

Construction costs at Bolling Field are averaging about $78,000 a month, including the cost of the materials used, and the additional grant is expected to be sufficient until final approval of the full project sum.

Although when the project was originally submitted to the WPA, it was estimated $590,000 would be sufficient to complete the flying field and runways, Army engineers are requesting an additional $240,000 because of the recent institution of the prevailing wage scale, it was learned. When the plans for the original project were drawn up WPA workers were receiving security wages.

At the present rate of construction, Army officers estimated the field would be completed in from six to seven months. More than 60 per cent of the field is already done, they said.

The WPA project now pending in the WPA calls only for the grading of the field and the construction of the runways. For the erection of hangars, machine shops, barracks and other buildings, additional funds will be sought, probably from Congress.

Driver Arrested; Car Smoke Screen Among 8 Charges

Eight charges ranging from larceny of two automobiles, operating and possession of a smoke screen, to driving without a permit were placed against Richard Adams, colored, 29, of the 1300 block of V street northwest yesterday following his arrest by vice squad police.

A companion, Claude Holmes, colored, 2?, of the 800 block of New Jersey avenue northwest, was charged with larceny of two automobiles and possession and operation of a smoke screen.

According to Sergt. George Deyoe and William McEwen, of the vice squad, they started pursuit of the men on suspicion the car contained illegal liquor. A smoke screen was laid down on them, but they finally captured the men.

Investigation disclosed the automobile had been stolen from the Triangle Motor Co. Another car theft charged to the men included an auto stolen from the Capital Motors Co. several weeks ago.

Adams was charged with violating the liquor tax act, two counts of grand larceny, operating and possessing a smoke screen (for which the maximum penalty is ten years in jail), driving without a permit, dead tags and no lights.

Tired Southeast Business Men Frolic in Chapel Point Outing

The Southeast Business Men's Association held its annual outing yesterday and attendants frolicked all day on the beach, in the water and in the dance hall at Chapel Point.

It was the eighth annual outing. The outing is the only opportunity the men who run stores and business establishments in the Southeast section get to make play a co-operative affair.

More than 800 were present at the outing. Long before noon they began crossing the hill that leads to Chapel Point in automobiles. Hundreds came that way. Hundreds more sailed down on the S. S. Potomac. Those who rode the boat down left early in the morning—at 9 a. m. The trip takes nearly four hours.

Contests of all kinds were held—all kinds from a husband-calling contest to a beauty contest, from foot racing to pie eating.

Prizes were awarded holders of lucky tickets in a raffle which preceded lunch.

Under the trees which spread out over the lawn at Chapel Point, the business men ate their lunch. Baskets of sandwiches and cake, pickles and ice cream were brought down from Washington.

Arthur Shaffer, chairman of the outing, said it was one of the most successful the organization has ever held. Clarence F. Donohoe, president of the organization, and Dick English, vice president, said they thought so, too.

And everybody else must have thought so, too, for when the boat was ready to leave it had to blow ten times for everybody to come aboard, because nobody wanted to leave—they all were having such a good time.

St. James' Carnival Will Open on Monday

St. James' Church will open its carnival Monday on the Church grounds, Thirty-fourth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast. Events have been planned for each night during the week, including Saturday, the closing night.

Taxicab Driver Missing 2 Days Is Hunted Here

Charles L. Miller, a 44-year-old taxicab driver who formerly was a wealthy contractor, today was the object of an intensive search by police. Miller is reported missing since Tuesday from his home, 3008 Twentieth street northwest.

Suspicion was aroused when Miller's taxicab was found parked at Tenth and Rhode Island avenue northwest early yesterday morning. He was last reported seen Tuesday discharging a passenger at the Sister's College, Catholic University.

All available men of the Twentieth Precinct, two radio cars and J. O. Patton, of the Missing Persons Bureau, have been ordered to keep a special lookout for the former contractor.

Miller built many houses in the Woodridge section before he was forced out of business during the depression. He is a World War veteran. He recently began driving a cab.

D. C. Will Get Reformatory Repair Plans

Only 3 New Structures Included in Project, Sultan Reports.

Plans for modernization of the National Training School for Girls, target of sharp senatorial criticism at the last session of Congress, will be submitted to the District Commissioners tomorrow for approval by Lieut. Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner.

The design calls for construction of two small dormitories, called "cottages," to replace the dormitory for white girls that was labelled "medieval" and "barbarous" by Senators Copeland (Democrat), of New York, and King (Democrat), of Utah.

A gymnasium and assembly hall also is to be constructed on the training school grounds. Present buildings, including a barn, will be remodelled and used for school rooms or other purposes.

Colored inmates will remain in old buildings, but will be given more ample quarters, and the structures will be rehabilitated.

Although $100,000 was voted for the school by Congress, the act did not specify how much of the money could be used for building construction. The engineer commissioner said it had been estimated that $66,000 might be so expended.

The plan visions future expansion of the school on Conduit road, but only three new structures will be built at this time because of limited funds.

The school dormitories, fashioned after private homes, will have 13 private bedrooms for girls, plus quarters for two matrons. The "cottages" also will have living rooms which the girls may use for recreational purposes.

Workhouse Plan.

Plans also have been drawn and will be submitted to the board of new dormitories for an administration building in the women's group at the District Workhouse at Occoquan.

The District has only $40,000 for the prison dormitories, so that only two can be built at this time, even though convict labor and bricks will be used.

The prison dormitories, handsomely designed, will have 52 beds in a large room and a living room for recreation.

Both the training school and the workhouse building plans have been drafted in accordance with suggestions from the welfare department and in keeping with modern thought on corrective institutions, Sultan said.

Postlude

Under a cloud-wrapped moon that appeared to have been planted for the occasion, the Watergate thousands cooled off last night listening to music that mixed well with the river breezes off the Potomac.

Miss Antonia Brico was conducting again, and although some of her numbers might have appeared appropriately on the most formal of programs, she made last night's concert a summer one.

Even the extended symphony of Cesar Franck's, the D Minor composition that can usually throw listener and player alike into a spell of contemplation, seemed light and airy. The breeze seemed to play with the solemn, as well as the gayer, themes.

Miss Brico made a hit with the Johann Strauss number, "Tales from the Vienna Woods." The audience cheered when she brought it out again for an encore at the end of the program—and the vote of approval was a sincere one.

Cesar Franck, the composer, was on the program twice. His symphony filled the first half, and his tone poem, "Les Eolides," was a big part of the second half. The latter was most welcome music; it probably hadn't been played by a symphony orchestra here before. Miss Brico made her orchestra an excellent sounding board for this piece.

The "Russian Easter" overture by Rimski-Korsakov came as a direct contrast to the meditative Franck poem. But it brought the program to a rousing climax, and it is summer music, the title notwithstanding.

Miss Brico will conduct the last concert of her engagement tomorrow night. Her program will include the Fourth Brahms Symphony. Norman Frauenheim, pianist, will be soloist in the Liszt Hungarian Fantasie for Piano and Orchestra. Then the orchestra will play two Debussy Nocturnes—"Nuages and Fetes." Finally, there will be "Stenka Razin" a symphonic poem by Glazounov.

Warners Plan Picture House In Georgetown

Work Soon to Begin on New Calvert Theater on Wisconsin Avenue.

Within the next six weeks construction will be begun on the Calvert Theater, a new neighborhood motion picture house, to be erected at 2324 Wisconsin avenue northwest, between Hall Place and Calvert street, according to announcement made late yesterday by John J. Payette, Warner Brothers' general zone manager in the Washington territory. It is expected that the new residential playhouse will be ready for formal dedication on or about Christmas Day.

Thus some 40,000 residents of the section of the city including Old Georgetown Cathedral Heights and Massachusetts Park, who heretofore have had to travel some distance for their motion picture entertainment, will have a theater in their own community as a result of the arrangements completed yesterday by Mr. Payette, and the Globe Amusement Co., of Washington, D. C., of which Joe Makover is president.

Sixteenth in Chain.

The Calvert, which will be the sixteenth theater Warner Bros. operate in the District of Columbia, is part of the theater construction program announced by Mr. Payette last December. Since then, the Penn Theater on Pennsylvania avenue has been opened, and the Uptown, on Connecticut avenue, and the Sheridan, at 6217 Georgia avenue, are in process of construction and will be opened this fall.

The Calvert has been designed by John Eberson, internationally famous architect, who has designed some of the finest theaters in America and Europe. In general plan, the Calvert will be modern, but not extremely so, and will embody throughout the latest improvements for the pleasure and comfort of the patrons.

A distinct innovation will be the seats, which will be arranged according to the Continental plan, that is, each row will be three feet away from those in front and behind, thus permitting patrons latitude of motion and easy access in and out of the rows of seats. The theater, which will be of the one-floor type, will seat 1,100 persons.

Completely Air Conditioned

Complete air-conditioning plants will provide comfortable temperature during the summer. The heating plant will be of the newest type and no radiator will show in the entire structure. Light will be supplied by direct and indirect fixtures and special outlets.

The building itself will be of limestone and granite. The lobby, 35 by 50 feet, will provide a luxurious approach to the theater. In addition to the theater itself, three stores will be included in the building. Plans and specifications will be ready for bidders within three weeks.

Fete Closes Saturday.

The church carnival, which has been in progress at Holy Comforter Church, Fifteenth and East Capitol streets, will be closed Saturday night, the Rev. Edward J. A. Nestor, assistant pastor, announced yesterday. The outdoor event, staged for the benefit of the parish, has been well attended, Father Netsor said.

Patient 143 Days, Back.

Erie, Pa., July 29 (AP).—Sixty-nine-year-old Mrs. Mary Lindbloom spent 143 days in a hospital after she fell and broke her left leg in February. Although Mrs. Lindbloom was discharged several days ago, she returned to the hospital again today. Her right leg was broken in a fall.

About the Showshops

BELIEVE it or not, but the galloping summer season already has swished itself around to the point where it becomes necessary once more to nominate some fair young creature for the honor of competing for the slightly synthetic title of "Miss America" in that fabulous September beauty pageant that brings late-summer luster to the beach and Boardwalk at Atlantic City. Insofar as the National Capital is concerned, the first step in this gay business is to select a "Miss Washington" to represent this city in the national competition of pep, pulchritude and periphery.

BELL.

As has been the case for the past several years, responsibility for the selection of a suitable "Miss Washington" has been placed squarely upon the shoulders of Al Stern, native impresario, whose present activities center in the rhythmic pastiming that nightly attracts crowds of young people who like to dance to Chevy Chase Lake.

Mr. Stern informs me that the "Miss Washington" preliminaries will get under way Tuesday night at 9. That would be August 4. On that evening tentative selections will be made by the beauty judges for the finals to be held on Friday night, August 7. Applications should be filled out and filed with Mr. Stern at once by all Washington beauties who aspire to represent their city in what has been briefly and cogently dubbed "The Atlantic City Showmen's Variety Club Jubilee."

This festival of feminine frippery and charm will be held in Atlantic City from September 8 to 14, inclusive.

The board of judges of the "Miss Washington" contests at Chevy Chase Lake will be comprised of the drama desks of the local press, Gene Ford, of Loew's Fox; an artist or two and a stylist, the complete roster to be made known in due course.

Judging, as heretofore, will be based on beauty of both face and figure, poise, carriage and all of the characteristics usually deemed essential to success in any such keenly competitive joust as this particular beauty pageant always turns out to be.

To win, either locally or in the national competition, it is almost an inescapable necessity that the contestant possess the face of a Helen of Troy, the figure of Venus and the bathing suit of a Jantzen!

Not precisely inexorable, but they all help.

• • • •

Whether the national title of "Miss America" is won or not, the title of "Miss Washington" is not to be tossed off lightly by prospective candidates. The lucky young woman winning the right to represent the Capital at Atlantic City will be completely outfitted, entertained and handsomely feted entirely free of cost to herself. Win, lose or draw, it is a very elegant late-summer joy-ride.

Snooping around for a little advance information relative to the impending season of legitimate drama in the Capital, one happens upon the hint that the season of 1936-37 at the National probably will get under way on or about Labor Day with the so-called "road show" presentation of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," starring Norma Shearer in the role of Juliet and Leslie Howard as Romeo, with John Barrymore as Mercutio and Edna May Oliver as the Nurse.

There is also some gossip being bruited about that the same producing company's film version of Pearl S. Buck's novel of "The Good Earth," essayed on the stage with not too much success by the Theater Guild a few seasons back, also will be presented as a road attraction at the National. This is the item starring Paul Muni and Luise Rainer in the roles created on the stage by Earl Larimore and Mme. Alla Nazimova, with Mr. Larimore succeeded in short order as Wan Lung by Claude Rains. This seems a trifle more nebulous than the "Romeo and Juliet" booking and, I believe, even that has not been set down in writing as yet.

The likelihood at the moment seems to be that the first production of living drama at the National this fall will be a new Max Gordon production, the identity of which has not as yet been disclosed. Mr. Gordon has been among the early starters on E street these past few seasons with such welcome contributions to the gayety of nations as "The Farmer Takes a Wife" and "Pride and Prejudice," so that part of it sounds all right.

At any rate, one thing seems assured. The legitimate season will open much earlier this year than it has for many past. The lads at the big desks along Broadway are anticipating the best season in at least a decade—even surpassing last, which was the best season in a least a decade, if you get the idea.

• • • •

So when D. J. Hughes' Fountain Pen Shop moves from the National Theater Building to its new quarters on Fourteenth street, between E and F, what legitimate theater on E street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, probably will have a cocktail lounge adjoining its lobby? Don't tell him, lady, make him guess!

• • • •

It is the helpful Prof. Frank La Falce, of the local executive offices of the Warner Brothers, who calls up to say that pursuant to this column's squawk that he was being neglected by the movie-makers, Victor Moore, old Alexander Throttlebottom himself, drollest of the old-school comedians still extant on the boards, has been placed under contract by the Freres Warner for a part in "The Gold Diggers of 1937."

Along with Mr. Moore, the Warners also have signed Osgood Perkins, eminent stage player, for a part in the same perennial charade that had its inception when the late David Belasco recruited an admirable company headed by Bruce McRae to support Ina Claire in the original "Gold Diggers." Nice going, is what I always say.

• • • •

Reverting briefly to that "Miss Washington" contest, final selection will be made at precisely the right time to permit the winner to take part in Dr. Frank T. Shyne's water carnival, planned to precede the second annual Showboat Cruise of the Variety Club of Washington. The Doc, who has saved many a stage performance by his deft ministrations to stricken actors, confides that a battle royal will be one of the features of his wharfside merrymaking. That ought to be fun, as long as you don't get in it.

• • • •

Power-of-Suggestion Note.

It seems obvious that if the Olympic committee didn't want its athletes to attend cocktail parties en route to Europe, it never should have shipped them on a boat named the Manhattan!

Barrymore Is Ill; Suits Are Delayed

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP).—Trial of John Barrymore's two current lawsuits was deferred today until Monday so he will be in better health to testify—his lawyers and the judge hope.

The lawyers asked the delay. They said the actor was too ill to come to court, but his testimony would be needed to refute expected testimony from the defense concerning "embarrassing incidents" involving him. These incidents were not described.

Barrymore is suing his former business manager and former secretary, Henry Hotchener and Emmett D. Camomile, respectively, for accountings.

Dr. W. Drew Chipman, court-appointed physician, reported today to Superior Judge Goodwin J. Knight he was informed Barrymore had been in a sanitarium "because of excessive drinking."

Henry Ford to Mark 73d Birthday Today

Big Bay, Mich., July 29.—Following a custom he established a few years ago, Henry Ford will observe his birthday tomorrow at his lodge in the Huron Mountain Club acres, northwest of here on the rugged Lake Superior coast.

It will be Ford's seventy-third birthday, but it will be merely an incident in the annual vacation the industrialist allows himself at this season. No celebration was planned.

They Will Put Out the "San Francisco" Fire!

Having enjoyed a record-breaking, three-week run, "San Francisco" and its horrendous reproduction of the earthquake and fire of 1906 will be expunged from the screen of Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow to make way for Shirley Temple, the biggest little star of them all, in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," latest of her stellar vehicles. The tiny Temple is pictured above in one of the picture's gayer moments, flanked (left and right) by Jack Haley and Alice Faye. Mr. Haley is a comedian of parts and Miss Faye one of the stage's most popular singing comediennes. Others of note will be seen in the diminutive star's support in this subject.

Film and Stage Bills Promise A Varied Week

New and Old Pictures Are Included in Line-up Opening Tomorrow.

Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay are the foremost members of the cast to be seen in "Public Enemy's Wife," a different type of G-man story, announced as chief screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Cesar Romero, Robert Armstrong and Dick Foran are among the numerous others who also appear to advantage in this exciting story of an innocent girl implicated in the crimes of her husband. On the stage the "Big Broadcast of 1936," starring Ross, Pierre and Shuster, will provide the headline attraction. Other acts will be offered by Irene Vermillion, dancer, supported by the Kermit Dart Ensemble; Hector and Pals, famous movie dog stars, and the Four Comets.

Shirley Temple, supported by Jack Haley, Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen, Claude Gillingwater, Sara Haden, Jane Darwell and numerous others of note, will be the pictured star of the bill beginning at Loew's Palace Theater in "Poor Little Rich Girl," her latest vehicle for Twentieth Century-Fox. New revelations of the Temple talent are said to be made in this story of a lonesome little girl who runs away from the home of her wealthy parents in quest of excitement and company. The bill also will inculue a new release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series.

"Two Against the World," a melodrama dealing with a radio station that ruins a woman's life to create a sensational program that will attract new listeners, will be presented as chief feature of the screen bill announced for the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Humphrey Hogart and Beverly Roberts, who made her screen debut with Al Jolson in "The Singing Kid," are cast in the costellar roles. The program, as usual, will be augmented by short sound subjects and a full 15-minute newsreel.

Headed by such notables as Jack Oakie, Sally Eilers, Kent Taylor, Frances Drake, J. Farrell MacDonald, Sidney Blackmer and Claude Gillingwater a strong cast insures a skillful performance of the principal roles in "Florida Special," the screen feature of the bill for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater. The action of the play takes place aboard a crack Southern train and develops situations that are as thrilling as they are amusing and surprising. The stage portion of the entertainment will be supplied by George Olsen and his orchestra, assisted by Ethel Shutta, singer par excellence.

"The Harvester," based on the famous novel by Gene Stratton Porter, will continue the major feature of the bill at RKO-Keith's Theater throughout the remainder of the present week, to be followed next Thursday night by Katharine Hepburn in "Mary of Scotland," the film version of the Maxwell Anderson play in which Helen Hayes starred on the stage. Fredric March appears in the Philip Merivale role of Bothwell in the picture.

Lionelle Barrymore, supported by Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Lawton, Henry B. Walthall and Rafaela Ottiano, will return to F street for the week beginning tomorrow in "The Devil Doll," the unusual Tod Browning picturization of the story of "Burn, Witch, Burn," recently seen on the screen at Loew's Fox. This startling picture, in which the star assumes the guise of a woman, will be the chief feature of the bill at Loew's Columbia Theater, where it will be supported by the usual short-reel subjects and newsreel.

With Leslie Howard, Myrna Loy and Ann Harding in "The Animal Kingdom" as the foremost feature of its current bill, the Little Theater, beginning Sunday will present a revival of "Clive of India," in which Ronald Colman is cast in the title role. Short subjects and newsreel will complete the program.

The clearness and purity of the water in the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo Park is not an accident. One of the most complete filtration systems in the country pours a million and a half gallons of purified water through the pool every 24 hours. The Crystal Pool, however, is only one of more than 50 attractions at Glen Echo. The Spanish Garden Ballroom is among the most popular of the other entertainment features.

Arthur Godfrey and Arch McDonald, two of radio's most popular local figures, have made arrangements to charter the Wilson Line steamer City of Washington for a personal appearance benefit cruise Saturday night, August 1. Many vaudeville and other attractions are promised and tickets already are on sale at the company's office.

'Sea Power—What Is It?' To Be Navy Day Slogan

"Sea Power—What Is It?" will be the slogan for this year's observance of Navy Day, October 27, anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt.

This was revealed yesterday with the announcement by Admiral William H. A. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, that the Navy had accepted the invitation of Nelson Macy, national chairman of the Navy League, to co-operate with the league in observing the day.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywords.

Hollywood, July 29.

There are many strange ways by which a girl gets a job as an actress in Hollywood. But the yarn of this particular young lady ranks with the best.

A producer was in a Beverly Hills Victrola store listening to some foreign-made records. He heard one record, that of a female opera star, and believed her to be the greatest singer he ever heard. He decided to sign her for pictures. It was an Austrian-made record.

The producer took the name from the record, and the next day called the company's representative there to sign the singer to a movie contract and to have her leave for Hollywood immediately.

He had signed merely a name—and a great voice. He didn't even ask for a photograph. Therefore he didn't know what the great singer looked like and if she could speak English.

• • • • •

The foreign opera singer arrived. She had a pretty face, but she was broad and husky, and carried considerable extra poundage. And she couldn't speak English.

• • • • •

The studio had her under contract. They immediately put her on a diet. They gave her a trainer, to help her take off weight. A teacher was assigned to teach her ESnglish.

The singer's name is Milliza Korjus, and she is scheduled to play in the flicker "Strauss," for Metro. She really has a great singing voice. In fact—and this is the payoff—her voice is so great that it records too well for the average sound equipment now being used in the majority of movie theaters, and an inferior singer may have to be used in the picture.

• • • •

Charlie Adler, one of the Yacht Club boys, tells of this incident, which he insists took place at the Trocadero while he was there. A man came in by himself, sat at a front table and ordered graham crackers and milk.

The man ate his meal, watched the movie actors and actresses dance awhile, and then called for his check. The check totaled $17.50.

The man squawked. "Seventeen dollars and fifty cents for graham crackers and milk. I won't pay it. There must be some mistake." He asked for Billy Wilkerson.

• • • •

Wilkerson came to the table. He looked at the check carefully. "The figures are correct," said Wilkerson. "The total is $17.50, but what I don't understand is, where did they get the graham crackers?"

• • • •

Hollywood is having a splurge of costume pictures. The latest ready for release are "Romeo and Juliet" and "Mary of Scotland." There was a time when costume pictures kept people away from the box office, and an exhibitor wouldn't book them.

Also, the length of pictures is getting longer. Both "Romeo" and "Mary" run over two hours. In fact, if they keep making pictures longer, Hal Horne says that instead of saying "The End," they'll have to flash, "Positively the End" on the screen.

McDiarmid's Play Ousts Welsh

Scores, 6–4, 6–2; Wood Eliminates Parker, Mangin Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Seabright, N. J., July 29.—Sidney Wood, of New York, emphasized his return to competitive tennis with a hard-earned three-set victory over Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., today in a day marked by the elimination of the Davis Cup doubles pair of Donald Budge and Gene Mako from the forty-ninth annual Seabright Invitation Tournament.

The lanky Oakland, Calif., youth and his blonde-haired partner from Los Angeles were upset by Henry Culley, of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 9—7. Culley and Hunt, who last week won the Longwood crown, broke through Budge's service in the first set and Mako's in the second to win.

Mangin Wins.

Joining Wood in the semifinals were Defending Champion Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., with a 6—1, 4—6, 9—7 victory over Hal Surface, of Kansas City; John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., who defeated Barnard Welsh, of Rockville, Md., 6—4, 6—2, and Hunt, who eliminated Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., 8—6, 6—2.

Wood playing in his third competitive singles match this year, scored at 6—4, 0—6, 8—6 after Parker held match point in the twelfth game of the final set.

McDiarmid eliminated his roommate and buddy in disposing of Welsh, for the pair met in Rockville and motored to the scene of the tourney. But friendship apparently had no place in the pattern of today's play, for the big Texan breezed through to victory in convincing fashion. Welsh seemed a bit tired and off-color after his thrilling victory over Gene Mako yesterday.

With victory in sight, Parker's passing shot at match point zipped past Wood at the net and dropped over the line, the reprieved Wood went on to break through service, take his own and shatter Parker's last delivery at love. The unnerved Parker served a double fault and ended the match with an error on his vulnerable forehand.

An official tabulation of tennis writers showed, Parker made 39 errors on his forehand, an undercut push shot impelled by a peculiar wrist movement.

The semifinal round of the women's singles was reached with Alice Marble defiating Florence Leboutillier, of Westbury, N. Y., 6—0, 6—3; Carolin Babcock beating Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, 6—4, 6—1; Sylvia Henrotin, of France downing Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 7—5, 6—4, and Grace Wheeler trimming Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., 7—5 6—3. Misses Wheeler, Babcock and Marble are from Los Angeles.

Medwick Hits Two Homers in Double-Header With Dodgers.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 29.—The revived Dodgers handed the St. Louis Cardinals their worst beating of the year in the opener of a double-header today and then just lost out in the nightcap to gain an even break in the twin bill. The scores were 22 to 7 and 5 to 4.

Only Ducky Medwick's big bat, which pounded out two homers in the second game, saved the Gas House gang from complete humiliation, as the Brooklyns went on their biggest scoring and hitting spree of the season with a 31-hit barrage in the opener.

Sharkey, Louis Pick Sites for Training

By the United Press.

New York, July 29.—Training grounds for Joe Louis and Jack Sharkey, who box 10 rounds in Yankee Stadium August 18, were decided upon today.

Louis picked Pompton Lakes, N. J., and his two weeks of training will not be open to the public. Only newspapermen will be admitted to watch him batter sparmates.

Sharkey goes back to his lucky training grounds at Orangeburg, N. Y., where he will work out before all who want to come and watch him.

Championship Bout To Be in Afternoon

New York, July 29 (U.P.).—The heavy weight title fight between Champion James J. Braddock and Max Schmeling, of Germany, will be staged Saturday afternoon, September 26, in Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl, Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston announced today.

The New York athletic commission has to approve the afternoon date, which will be the first afternoon fight of importance since the Dempsey-Carpentier title bout at Boyle's Thirty Acres in Jersey City, July 2, 1921.

Rippy Beats Links Titlist In Replay

By Dave Herman.

Gaining revenge for the defeat handed him by Pat Abbott in the finals of the National Public Links golf championship at Bethpage Park course, Farmingdale, Long Island, Claude Rippy, 23-year-old Washington clerk, trimmed the Altadena, Calif., movie extra, 2 and 1, yesterday at East Potomac's course.

Over the same links where a few weeks ago he set an all-time District and Middle Atlantic record with his smashing 274 total for 72 holes, Rippy played with his usual brilliance and poise to score a 72, two over par.

Abbott, 1 down to Rippy at the turn, slipped over par on the last few holes, finishing 5-5, to wind up with a 75.

Rain Hampers Both.

Commissioner George Allen, himself an ardent golfer, who followed Rippy's play at Farmingdale with considerable interest, welcomed the two golfers in ceremonies preceding the match.

Rain, which broke out just as the players putted out on the first hole, proved a handicap to the golfers, both missing numerous greens and being a trifle wild with their wood shots.

Abbott took command of a one up lead on the third hole, a short one, after both had missed the green. The Californian was up close for his three and Rippy was wide, missing his putt, taking a four.

Back came the Ripper to capture the next two holes, the fourth with a five to Abbott's six, the fifth with a birdie four, after knocking his third shot to within 3 feet of the pin.

Rippy went two up at the eighth, scoring a birdie three, thanks to another deadly pitch, and they went to the turn with Rippy one up after Abbott took the ninth with a par four when Rippy overshot the green with his second.

Rippy won the tenth with a four to Abbott's five, both being short with their seconds, but Rippy was the more accurate with his approach. Abbott had a chance to win back a hole on the fourth. He sank a 10-footer for his three, but Rippy, 8 feet away, plopped in his for a half.

Abbott lost the match on the seventeenth, a 174-yarder, knocking his tee shot into a trap, exploding way over the green with his second. He got a five. Rippy, just off the green in one, was down for his four.

Just as he did at Farmingdale, Rippy consistently outdrove the hollow-cheeked Californian yesterday. Rippy went over par on four holes, but was aided by his two birdies. Abbott didn't get a single birdie, and was over par on four holes. Those 5s on the last two holes, which were the result of carelessness on Abbott's part, put the dent in his score.

American, National League Balls Alike

Chicago, July 29 (AP).—William Harridge, president of the American League, commenting today on reports that the American League has been using a livelier ball, said that he had been assured by the firm manufacturing balls that those used by both the junior circuit and the National League "are identical in every particular and in every detail."

Harridge said George A. Reach, of the manufacturing company, informed him that the balls used in both leagues are so nearly the same "that after they are completely finished we do not know until we receive orders which ball is to be stamped American League or National League."

A Preview of Some Olympic Spectacles

Two Mystery Ousters Thin Olympic Team

By Paul Gallico.

Berlin, July 29.—The ranks of the once-puissant, cocksure American Olympic team are being steadily depleted. This morning two boxers were dropped from the team for mysterious reasons; this afternoon, Don Hume, stroke of the niversity of Washington eight-oared crew, was taken from the shell and sent to the hospital with a severe chest cold.

Loss of Hume, key man of the eight that Americans hoped would yield an Olympic title, is likely to prove disastrous to America's cause. The race still is a fortnight away, but Hume is so sick he may not regain his strength in time for the event.

"Humie means everything to us," Coach Al Ulbrickson said tonight. "Without him we would not have much of a chance."

The pair of boxers who joined Eleanor Holm Jarrett in athletic limbo are Joe Church, featherweight alternate from Batavia, N. Y., and Howell King, colored welterweight from Detroit. Their offense, training rule infractions, was far less flagrant than the woman backstroke champion's whoopee, but their relegation to the status of former members of the team was the same.

"Both boys were ordered home because they were too homesick to be of any further value to the team in any capacity, even as sparring partners," was the way it was explained by Roy Davos, of Chicago, manager of the boxing team. But nobody took the homesickness explanation very seriously. Another reason was given to German newspapermen—they being told the two boxers "couldn't stand the climate."

Reports of training breaks persisted as the thumbed-out pair were packed off, homeward bound, on the liner Manhattan, the big party boat that brought Uncle Sam's representatives over. Their dismissal, yielding a new high in the firing of Olympic athletes, seems a trifle more complicated than appears on the surface—again team morale seemingly was deeply involved—but the "Heimweh" excuse was swallowed, somehow, and the remainder of the big team just let it go at that.

To date no American Olympic officials have been fired from their positions, although there is a general movement on foot here to charter a leaky boat, pull out the stopper and send 'em all home.

Your deponent arrived here after the Eleanor Holm Jarrett storm had died down. The little lady, reconciled to her fate, was discovered contemplating a huge swatch of roses and a photograph of himself sent by the erstwhile German Crown Prince, son of the former Kaiser, and also an inviation from him to lunch.

"Whadda I want with a crown prince when I got a guy like Art Jarrett?" she said. "Honest, he was swell—he called me up on the transatlantic telephone and didn't bawl me out at all. I was afraid I'd catch hell, but he asked me if I was all right and not sick and said he loved me no matter what I did and not to worry. He said he was coming over by the first boat to take care of me. Is that a swell guy—or is that a swell guy?

"What about this crown prince, oh, he calls me up and says, 'Eleanor, this is the crown prince; come and have lunch with me,' and his son invited me to tea. What is this, a gag? Who ever heard of back-stroke swimmers and crown princes mixing? Come on, let's beat it."

Deponent is now one up on the crown prince. We took Eleanor to lunch at the Zoo, dining among lions, bears, flamingoes, etc., and listened to the bona fide tales of the goings on aboard the Manhattan. They are better left unprinted, and we were told in confidence anyway.

The child realizes she made a mistake, but cannot understand why she was picked upon as the scapegoat. No one else can, either. She's strictly on the wagon now—locking the stable doors, etc. She says likker chokes her now; she can't swallow it. Unquestionably she got a foul deal from the officials.

We visited the Swan Stadium and found Diving Coaches Pinkstone, of Detroit, and Cady, of Los Angeles, moaning over the brilliant form of two Japanese divers, Shibba Hara, Nippon's ace springboard man, and M. Osawa, girl platform diver. Our coaches say they are likely to win diving events and certainly will make us hustle. Hara is plain marvelous off the board.

In addition to the moaning in our rowing and boxing circles, there is the condition of Ann Govednik, breast stroker, who has an infected ear that was not well cared for in the first place. Our girl swimmers complain of the bad organization of their quarters and also complain that the swim team chaperone snoops and spies on them.

Berlin is magnificently dressed for the great show. Every house on every street is beflagged and the decorated streets are jammed with people. The Germans are being wonderfully polite and cordial and helpful to the Americans. The English language is the passport to all the courtesy and consideration possible.

Ragged Play Afield Is Costly

Cohen, Appleton Victims in First; Weaver Loses Second.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 29.—The Nats resumed their losing streak on a mass-production scale today, turning out an almost incredible 11-to-6 loss to the Cleveland Indians in the first game of a double-header, and then eking out a 6-to-5 defeat in the second game.

Losing that second game for Monte Weaver was comparatively simple. Rightfielder Cecil Travis merely threw a ball to second base instead of home plate and the Indians' winning run scored unmolested in the seventh inning. But losing that first game was quite a feat for the Nats.

They lost it by a five-run margin despite the fact that they outhit the Indians, 12 to 10, but to the great glee of the 25,000 leather-lunged individuals in the park, the Indians boasted an 8-to-0 lead at the end of the second inning on account of some very stupid defensive play by the Nats, backed up by some very inexpert pitching by Syd Cohen.

Lee Comes Back to Win.

The left-handed Thornton Lee, who had been knocked out of the box early in the first engagement, came back to pitch a five-inning relief shift that beat the Nats in the second game. The Indians made 11 hits off Monte Weaver, in contrast to 9 hits off Dennis Galehouse and Lee.

Washington actually was in front twice in that second game. After Averill's twentieth home run of the season, following Hughes' double, had put the Indians ahead, 2-1, in the first inning, the Nats bounced into a 3-2 lead in the third when, with two out, Kuhel walked, Stone singled, a run came in on a passed ball and another scored on Travis' single.

Syd Cohen pitched a single to Hughes and then trapped him off first base, but Red Kress came to Hughes' rescue. When the slow-footed Kress elected to chase Hughes back to first instead of throwing the ball, Hughes regained the bag safely. After Averill drew a walk, Catcher Millies couldn't find Trosky's meek pop foul and Trosky immediately expressed his thanks with his twenty-seventh homer of the season over the right-field wall, to set the Injuns up in a 3-to-0 lead.

But Cohen had no excuses in the While Charley Ruffing and Pat Malone held the Tigers to nine hits, the former taking credit for the victory, "Murderers' Row" landed on Joe Sullivan and Elden Auker to score all their runs in the first five innings before being stopped by the final two Detroit hurlers, Chad Kimsey and Roxie Lawson.

Genie Palatine Wins by Ten Lengths in Charles Town Feature

Victor Never Headed in Big Upset

Palumbo Has Three Winners; Double Is Worth $165.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 29.—Genie Palatine, a 3-year-old daughter of Genie with a reputation of being a rogue, gave the favorite betters another going over today with the opening of the four-day meeting of the Charles Town Horse Show Association today. Those who remembered her disgraceful race here earlier in the month looked for something else to bet. However, when the action was over, Genie Palatine had galloped home ten lengths in front of her nearest rival.

Wittekind, with Jockey Sammy Palumbo aboard, mahaged to save second money from Goantell. Master Lad was installed the favorite and failed to finish. The big star master gelding bled entering the stretch and Jockey Wisner dismounted.

Genie Palatine was only lukewarm in the betting which centered on Master Lad and No Mistake, the latter the winner of four straight races at the other meeting. When the pay-off came, the winner rewarded with an $8 mutuel.

Palumbo, the jockey champion hereabouts, took up where he left off some weeks ago and rode three winners to take the day's saddle honors. Among his winners were the two halves of the daily double. He piloted Steepee and Ardor to the wire and the combination paid off at the rate of $165 for each $2 investment. Ardor was a $20.20 proposition in his own right.

The opening program lured some 3,000 regular and occasional fans to this track. The racing was conducted over a track heavy on the inside and drying out on the outside. It was Palumbo's choice of the better going on the outside that allowed Ardor to win. The weather in the mountains was cloudy and cool.

Suffolk Downs, Boston, July 29 (AP).—Saturn, 2-year-old chestnut gelding by Zacaweista, carried the silks of Col. Phil T. Chinn to victory in the 5½-furlong Blue Hill Stakes before 18,000 fans at Suffolk Downs today.

Shaking off a stout challenge by Robert W. Colin's Willow Bud on the homeward curve, Saturn pulled away to win easily by two lengths in 1 minute 6 second, three-fifths shy of the track record.

Willow Bud, running coupled with Mary Elise as the Collins entry, fell back to keep pace with her stablemate, but John Longden drove Percy M. Pike's Swift Lad between them coming down the stretch and seized the place spot by half a length over Mary Elise.

Favorites Win Opening Matches in Mid-Atlantic Doubles Play

Baker, Doyle Take 5-Set Match

Ritzenberg, Judd Bow in Battle; Colvin, Roberts Win Marathon.

Favorites sailed through their first-round matches in the Middle Atlantic doubles tennis championship yesterday at Army and Navy Country Club, but not without struggles.

Four of the six battles on the service courts brought out some sensational tennis, with the match in which Joe Baker and Freddy Doyle defeated Hy Ritzenberg and Jean Judd taking the No. 1 feature spot on the opening day's program.

By 6—2, 6—2, 4—6, 4—6, 6—4, Baker and Doyle collaborated to eliminate Ritzenberg and his clever partner. It was the only match which went to five sets, and was won only by dint of some adroit back court stroking by Baker and Doyle.

Price Colvin and Frank Roberts staged a marathon second set in their triumphant march through Buddy Adair and Wiley Glassmire. Colvin and Roberts won, 6—3, 14—12, 6—3.

John O'Malley and Gene Owens put out Jack Hoyt and Jimmy Crutchfield, 6—1, 3—6, 6—0, 6—4, and the Sherfy twins, Ray and Lawrence, played smoothly to defeat the Bruns brothers, John and Bill, 6—4, 8—6, 6—1.

Stan McCaskey and Larry Phillips won from Hugh Trigg and Max Kay, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, and Hugh Lynch and Edward Mather put away Stanley Carr and Tommy Moorhead, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

Nate Ritzenberg and Happy Jacob and Bob Bradley and Harry Goldsmith did not complete their match. They will go at it again today at 4 p. m.

Other pairings today follow:

4 p. m.—McElveany and Hunt vs. Owens and O'Malley; McCue and Doyle vs. Sherfey brothers; Mitchell and Markey vs. McCaskey and Phillips; Blade and Robinson vs. Johnson and Channing; Lynch and Mather vs. Becker and Mehaffey; Shenkin and Stocklinski vs. Redgrave and Rice.

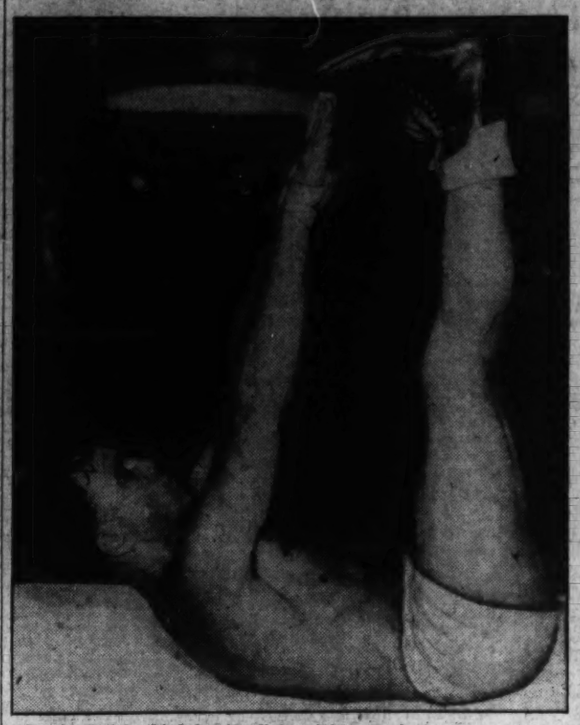
Klick Takes Out the Kinks



Frankie Klick, third-ranking lightweight, stretches out a few kinks as he prepares for his bout with District Lightweight Champion Howard Scott at Griffith's Stadium next Monday night.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 29.

By this time it is rather well established, or ought to be, that the chief need of the Washington ball club is an overhauling. Manned by the athletes who now make up the team, it is a ne'er-do-well ball club.

POVICH.

They can't blame it on the pitchers this year; that is, to the same degree that the pitchers have been blamed ever since the Nats won their last pennant in 1933. The team's pitching has been a heluva sight better than the rest of the team's play, despite the fact that the Washington pitching staff at the start of the season loomed as a discredit to any team.

Jimmy DeShong's 12 victories at this point and Buck Newsom's 13 reflect great credit on the Nats' pitching. Fifteen victories from DeShong over the course of the season represented Manager Harris' fondest hope at the start of the season, and aside from Newsom the rest of the pitching staff never was fancied very much anyway, so there is no disappointment from that quarter.

But the Nats have been operating virtually all season with some catching that is strictly second-division, some shortstopping that borders very close to the minor leagues, and some outfielding that disgraces the big leagues.

Cliff Bolton's chief value to the team lay in his supposed batting power, but Bolton all season has been far below the .300 mark. Take a fancy batting average away from Bolton and you have a very ordinary catcher. In fact, his catching on the Nats' current Western trip wouldn't earn him a regular job on the Ragamuffin A. C.

No. 2 disappointment has been Cecil Travis, both in the outfield and the infield. This department always thought he did tolerably well as a shortstop, but Bucky Harris, who is managing the team, didn't think so, and shifted him to rightfield. Out in rightfield, it is always a question whether Travis will catch a fly ball or suffer brain concussion in the attempt.

Combined with his defensive shortcomings, Travis for the first time in his major league career has slumped under .300 at bat, and a Travis hitting under .300 is no great asset to any ball club. But with Jesse Hill and Carl Reynolds as his only alternatives Harris feels constrained to play Travis in the outfield.

The shortstop situation was partly solved by moving Red Kress out of the job to second base and inserting Ossie Bluege at shortstop. Kress cannot stand the test of steady play and neither can the aging Bluege. Thus, even when Buddy Myer is able to return to his regular second-base job, the Nats will still be in need of a shortstop.

Washington's batting order in the series here with Cleveland strikingly illustrates the lack of the team's power. The Cleveland pitchers, after getting by Travis, who batted fifth, had virtually a sinecure, with Bluege, Kress, Millies and the pitcher bringing up the rear of the attack.

Theres' no sense being fooled by the league standings which show Washington having won 49 games against 48 defeats, which ordinarily is a respectable record for a team consigned to the second division before the season started. In these figures lies a sad story of the Nats this season.

Twenty-eight, more than half of their 49 victories, have been achieved by the Nats against two clubs—the seventh-place Browns and the eighth-place Athletics. They have won 21 of their 25 games against such weak opposition, but it is a sorry record that they own against the other clubs in the league.

In their 71 games against the five clubs that preceded them in the current league standings, the Nats have won only 28, and these are the clubs which the Washington team must beat out for a first-division berth. Not so good. In fact, no good.

Boys Playground Net Play to Begin Monday

Play in the boys' junior and senior playground tennis tournaments, scheduled to open today, has been postponed until Monday by Assistant Playground Supervisor Richard S. Tennyson because of wet courts. Meanwhile, a city playground team of boys under 14 years, led by the District junior champ, Leonard Sokol, of Burroughs, will play an Army-Navy Country team of boys in this class on the combination-surfaced courts at 10 a. m. today at the service club.

Mrs. Hill Ousts Mrs. Meckley At Shawnee

Loser Wins First Hole, But Is Badly Beaten in Remainder.

Shawnee on the Delaware, Pa., July 29.—In a startling upset Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Washington, took the measure of Mrs. Betty Meckley today by the score of 5 and 4 to earn the right to meet little Virginia Bacom in the finals Shawnee golf championship tomorrow.

Mrs. Hill, who went 19 holes yesterday to defeat Mrs. L. O. Cameron, came back today with some beautiful golf coupled with some real brilliant putting. Mrs. Meckley, after winning the first hole, lost the next two and from then on in it was easy for Mrs. Hill.

Mrs. Meckley, who has been playing so well this summer, was badly off in her putting taking three to get down on no less than six greens Mrs. Hill on the other hand had nine one-put greens during the round.

Mrs. Hill was out in 43 to be 4 up at the turn. She won the second, third, seventh, eighth and ninth holes. On the inward journey the finalist continued her streak by taking the tenth and twelfth. Mrs. Meckley finally won the thirteenth. They halved the fourteenth and the match was over. Miss Mascom also had a very easy time of it this morning, when she swamped Mary Fine, the defending champion, 4 and 3. Virginia was out in 42 to be 2 up at the turn, and then won the twelfth and thirteenth to cinch the atch. Tomorrow's finals will be over the 18-hole route, and, according to today's scores, should be an even struggle.

Dusek, 2 Others Hurt in Auto Accident

Substitutions Made in Mat Card for Tonight; Emil's Leg Is Broken.

Promoter Joe Turner's wrestling card scheduled for Griffith Stadium tonight was literally broken up by an automobile accident near Perryville, Md., yesterday. The mat impresario picked up the pieces, however, and emerged with a reconstructed program that sounds just as good as the original.

Emil Dusek, one of the four wrestling Dusseks, and Jack Donovan, both of whom were to have appeared on tonight's card, were injured when their automobile struck an abutment near Perryville.

Donovan Driving.

The injured were taken to a Havre de Grace hospital. Physicians said their conditions were good. The trio was en route to New York from Baltimore, where they wrestled Tuesday night. Donovan was said to have been driving.

In the absence of Emil and Donovan from the card which was to have featured the four delirious Duseks, Promoter Turner has shifted his talent so that Hank Barber is to tackle Ernie Dusek. Rudy Dusek will remain featured in a one-hour time limit fracas against Ivan Managoff. Joe Dusek will meet Joe Cox and Cliff Olson and Little Beaver are down for a 30-minute opener.

Managoff is a natural enemy of all Duseks. He defeated Ernie and Emil here recently and later strangled Rudy to sleep in Baltimore. His refusal to obey Referee Cyclone Burns in the Baltimore bout resulted in a fine of $100 and a one-year suspension by the Maryland State Aathletic Commission.

Referee Benny (Bubble) Bortnick, the pear-shaped arbiter, will be in the middle in the return bout. Rudy is expected to set a new high for aggressiveness tonight. He has boasted that he will pin Managoff's ears back as never a pair of cauliflowered listeners were pinned back before.

Youthful Hank Barber will face his toughest opposition to date when he sets out to snicker and snarl at Ernie Dusek. One of the most punishing of the heavyweights, Ernie generally is expected to prove the acid test for the 24-year-old Jewish grappler who is undefeated here.

Labor Triumphs, 1 to 0, Over Alcohol Unit Nine

Labor nosed out F. A. A., 1-0, in a Sports Center League game yesterday as Talbert defeated Heft in one of the prettiest hurling duels waged on the sandlots this year. Talbert set the Alcohol Administrators back on their heels with a five-hit brand of pitching, but Heft, even though defeated, went him two better. Labor got only three hits but bunched them in the sixth for the winning margin.

Scott-Klick Struggle Is Elimination Bout

By Bill McCormick.

For the first time in the history of legalized larrup here, Washington will be the scene of a real elimination bout of national importance when Howard Scott squares off against Frankie Klick at Griffith Stadium next Monday night.

The situation, it seems, is this. First of all, Tony Canzoneri, the venerable veteran who still rules the lightweight division, almost certainly will resign his 135-pound title so he can fight Barney Ross for the welterweight championship.

Someone must be named to fight Lou Ambers in a bout to decide the new champion. Klick is rated No. 3 on the list which ranks Ambers in second position, just under Canzoneri. Scott, in the forthcoming issue of The Ring magazine, a semiofficial boxing publication, will be rated sixth among the lightweights.

Should Scott decisively trounce Frankie, he undoubtedly would be in a position to command a share in the bout to decide the new king of the 135-pounders. A win by Klick would establish Frankie as the outstanding opponent for Ambers, whom many regard as the uncrowned champion of his division.

The bout, made possible when Lew Feldman pulled out of his scheduled contest with Scott, also will serve to boost Washington as an outstanding fistic center. Richmond, Baltimore and several other spots have been angling for the services of Klick, but his manager, Ray Carlin, declined to show his fighter there.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who pulled this one out of his little bag of tricks, had little or no trouble signing Frankie on short notice.

"We did all right in Washington with Canzoneri," said Carlin in accepting the match. "I regard the Capital as one of the best fight towns in the country. Therefore, we'd rather fight there than anywhere else outside of New York."

Klick, still holder of the somewhat chimerical junior welterweight championship, is the third title-holder to appear here within a month.

Horton Smith Wins Victoria Open Golf

Victoria, British Columbia, July 29 (AP).—Horton Smith, Chicago professional, won the $3,000 Victoria Open golf championship today with a 72-hole total of 269, 3 strokes under par for the four rounds of the 68-par Oak Bay Golf Course. He shot 68 on the last 18 holes, to add to his morning 72, and rounds of 64 on Monday and 65 on Tuesday.

Lorraine Gulli, Perce Wolfe Honored

The National Duckpin Bowling Congress yesterday chose Lorraine Gulli and Perce Wolfe, of Washington, as the "most valuable" bowlers in the country during the past season, the ranking committee announced.

Miss Gulli's season average was 115-305 for 356 games.

Honorable mention went to Lucille Young, of Washington; Helen Randlett, of Richmond; Audrey Mullaney, of Baltimore, and Rose Simmons and Jane Mackie, of Hartford.

Old Manhattan Open.

The Old Manhattan beer nine, in the Washington Post Association, left idle after the week-end by a forfeit, wants games Saturday and Sunday with strong unlimited teams to be played on their diamonds. Managers call Bob Fenton, District 1654 branch 256.

On the Air Today

The application of WOL for more power and a change of frequencies has been approved by the Federal Communications Commission. In case you are not familiar with the word "frequency," it means simply that WOL will be found on a new number on your dial after October 13.

WOL now is heard on 1310 kilocycles. The change will be made to 1230 kilocycles. The power has been advanced from 100 watts to 1,000 watts, also effective in October. This will give the station a much wider range.

Studios and offices will be removed from the Annapolis Hotel to a building on K street northwest, near Sixteenth street. The transmitter will be removed to a point about one-half mile east of Riggs road and Iager road, in Maryland.

Two more N. B. C. stars are going Hollywood. Helen Troy has been assigned a part in "Born to Dance," the new Eleanor Powell flicker. Helen is the "Susie at the Switchboard" of the "Carefree Carnival"—and was all set for a spot in a film last winter.

Dorothy Lamour, the "glamor girl" of the N. B. C. nets, will begin her film career with a bang. She has the lead in "Queen of the Jungle." The N. B. C. press department, to the best of my knowledge, has never exploited through photographs any artist more than Dorothy. And imagine my surprise when I find she is cast in what appears to be a "Tarzan" type picture. Dorothy is the typical show girl type.

Despite more acceptance speeches tonight, Bing Crosby and his guest stars will be heard as scheduled. Politics has taken Crosby on two vacation rides thus far in the campaign, but he escapes the jinx this week. Last week Mr. Landon was heard through the facilities of both Red and Blue networks of the N. B. C. This week the business side of the network's office says "the show must go on."

Beginning tonight, Rudy Vallee, through co-operation with a weekly magazine, begins a policy of presenting one or more personalities from the week's news grist. One news story is expected to be dramatized in each show in the future.

Wheat Jumps As Europe Buys Canadian Grain

September Rises 3⅞ Cents in Chicago; Corn Also Strong.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 29.—Immense European purchases from Canada, 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 bushels, with big speculative buying here, ran the Chicago wheat market 3⅞ cents upward today.

Except in Canada, reports today indicated little wheat is remaining for sale in surplus-producing countries, and fears were expressed that Canada this season may not raise even 200,000,000 bushels, the yield being cut more than half from what was looked for a short time ago.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Get Jolt From Profit-Taking and Short Selling; Grains Buoyant.

New York, July 29.—On sales of close to 2,000,000 shares the stock market was put through its paces for a while, after drifting in a narrow range most of the day. Prices failed to come up from the brief selling flurry and the closing quotations were near the poorest, leaving losses of 1 to 3 points for some of the high-priced issues, but the tone was steady for most stocks. Grains were buoyant. September wheat closed at 2¾ cents higher at 108⅞ cents a bushel.

Stock prices were well mixed throughout the trading. A poor impression was made by the opening losses in Seel common and preferred and the continued profit taking in the motors. The markets then edged along without great change in price, helped a little by strength in the airplanes, liquors and one or two other groups, until toward the close of trading, when a new wave of profit taking swept off some fractions.

Some Short Selling.

Railroad shares worked irregularly higher, but the price movements were narrow, Southern Railway was a favorite. Yellow Truck was a feature of the automotive division, climbing to a new high price on large sales as a reflection of increased earnings. Silver shares were uncertain. American Smelting hardened. Cerro and United States Smelting fell to new low levels. Mail orders were pushed higher.

Other soft stocks were General Mills and Safeway Stores. Most of the food shares weakened. Oils were indifferent to any development, although Skelly stood out with a gain of nearly two points. S. S. Kresge responded to declaration of an extra dividend with a new high price for the year. Market observers felt that the professional traders had tested the market with fairly large short sale orders.

Money markets were unchanged, except for another rather sharp rise in the price the Treasury had to pay for the latest borrowing on discount bills. The rise in the bill rate has been substantial enough to confirm ideas that the money market has passed its nadir, the only question now being the duration of the period of no great increase in most rates. The answer is that may depend largely on the extent of currency expansion. Authorities do not conceal the fact that the return flow of currency from bonus bond cashing has been much smaller than expected. A large return was counted upon by the Federal Reserve Board when it decided upon doubling the member bank reserve requirements.

French Currency Weakens.

With the new reserves in effect next month, the calling of bank balances and the adjustment of deficient reserves, plus the seasonal expansion in currency, may be sufficient to give a slight tightening effect to the money market. Foreign currencies were quiet. French money continued to slide and sterling hardened. The outbreak in Spain is scarcely calculated to increase confidence in Socialist France.

If anything the tone of the industrial news is becoming almost too good for comfort—that is, for the best feeling in the markets. When one side becomes overcrowded, market followers always look for a correction, and that is why the universal cheerfulness of business reports of all sorts adds to Wall street's caution. Many traders are beginning to wonder if the rapid pace of improvement in the past three months can be maintained in the current quarter, or for the remainder of the year.

Bullishness Everywhere.

Actually business seems to be a little better than it is, for in thinking of corporation earnings, and of their share in them through dividends, stockholders have been inclined to ignore the certain and great increase in taxation for next year. The case is somewhat similar, although more aggravated, to that of the wage earner who hopes for higher wages, but who doesn't take much notice of the rapid rise of living costs.

Midweek statistical contribution to the business pot was generous. Railroad freight car loadings, according to early reports for last week, promise to exceed those for the preceding week by more than 2 per cent and to run 24 per cent higher than for the corresponding period of last year. Traffic is now near the best since last October, and a slight further rise would lift car loadings to the highest in several years. Output of electrical energy also continues to mount to new levels. Indications for continuance of the high rate of activity are given in current reviews of the steel industry.

Year Ago.

A year ago a good bull market was on. Stock trading volume was running from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 shares a day, although the price of stock exchange memberships was down. Three sold in a row for $108,000. Silver was being pegged in the local market. General Motors was believed to have discounted its good second quarter earnings. The oldest member of the stock exchange—M. C. Bouvier—had just died. Congress was flirting with the idea of postalization of passenger fares, happily abandoned for the present reduced mileage rates. L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson, was taking a motor car trip through the West. Brokers were reporting increased business from London. Investment trust buying of Consolidated Edison (Gas then) was reported on the belief that operating economies would offset lower rates. Hog prices reached new high levels, as did the price of General Motors, and it was suggested that benefit checks would roll in just the same, which would take care nicely of the new motor car problem for the farmers.

U. S. Steel.

Great display publicity has greeted the good increase in earnings shown by the United States Steel Corporation for second quarter. The present comparatively high rate of operation and the prospect for the next several weeks suggest that in the third quarter also the corporation will cover its full preferred dividend requirement, with something to spare. Actual earnings of 75 cents for the common last quarter were under the easily accepted estimates of a Wall street news service, and also the dividend of $1 voted for the preferred fell a good deal short of the prediction from the same source.

Culbertson on Bridge

The One Chance.

Most bridge players are cultured, well educated people. In fact, I would wager a pretty penny on a group of such players in a general intelligence test against another group representing any other hobby, indeed, any profession. In certain departments, notably psychology and logic, I would expect my team to sweep the field, at the same time holding its own in the other divisions.

It cannot be denied, however, that some of the most pungently descriptive oridge terms are contributed by roughnecks! One of them, a friend of mine and a shrewd player, laying on his gashouse accent and phraseology a bit thickly for historic emphasis, says, "When there ain't but one place to get a trick, that's the place to look for it!" And he's perfectly right, as East found out after having played the following hand:

NORTH
♥A 9 7 4 2
♦J 10 5
♣A K 6

WEST
♠8
♥Q J 10 8 5
♦6 3 2

EAST
♠5 4 3
♥3
♦A K 9 8 4
♣Q J 10 4

SOUTH
♠K J 10 9 7 6 2
♥K 6
♦Q 7
♣7 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 no trump	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	5 spades	Pass
6 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

As Allan M. Loeb, of Chicago, pointed out in his letter giving me this hand, North was, to put it mildly somewhat optimistic in his kangaroo bidding. His two no-trump was a slight stretch in itself, which made his jump from three spades to four no trump completely unjustified.

Of course two diamond tricks could have been taken immediately by the defenders, and North-South were lucky that West's blind opening lead was not in that suit. The heart queen seemed safe to West, and so he led it. [Personally, I would have "tossed a coin" between diamonds and clubs.]

Declarer's problem looked easy when the dummy was spread, simply a matter of establishing a long heart for a diamond discard. But when, after drawing the three outstanding trumps, he led to dummy's heart ace [West playing the ten] and East showed out, the sky turned dark. There was only a faint chance left—a hoax. So dummy's low diamond was led, East clattering up with the king, and declarer false carded with the queen. East "fell" hard! He returned the queen of clubs and declarer did not give him another chance to correct the mistake. He ruffed a heart and ran off all but one trump. With three cards left West was down to one high heart and two clubs, dummy to a low heart and the king-six of clubs. East to the diamond ace and the jack-ten of clubs. When declarer played the last trump West had to chuck a club to guard dummy's heart. Dummy then let go the heart, and now East was squeezed, not being able to guard the club suit and still retain his diamond ace. Thus the contract was fulfilled.

A novice in East's position should have been able to see that unless there were two diamond tricks for his side there were not two of any description. South had shown a seven card spade suit, in addition to which two heart and two club tricks were staring East in the face. If South really had a singleton diamond and three clubs, he would have no other play for contract than to lead the jack of diamonds through East for a ruffing. East, therefore, had only to concentrate on the one suit in which declarer might hold two losers, the diamond suit.

Hysteria Charged To Administration

Alternative Is 'American Way' the Republicans Offer, He Asserts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, July 30.—Before a crowd of 25,000 persons whose wild cheering delayed his address for ten minutes and frequently interrupted him, Col. Frank Knox tonight accepted the Republican nomination for Vice President and declared "the preservation of free enterprise" is the fundamental issue in the 1936 campaign.

He bitterly denounced the "hysterical experiments" of the New Deal, the "false promises" of a paternalistic Government, regimentation, and "coercion of Congress," and declared the Republican Party promises a system of Government under which Americans can develop "self-support, self-government and self-respect."

Introduced by Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, Col. Knox stood helpless while the enthusiastic and colorful throng conducted a 10-minute demonstration of approval. When the demonstration finally was ended, the nominee, with radio time limited, had to contend with frequent outbursts of enthusiasm.

Senator Steiwer, introducing Col. Knox, hit at "would-be political royalists," apparently having in mind the "economic royalists" term hurled at his opponents by President Roosevelt in his acceptance speech at Philadelphia.

Indicts Political Royalists.

"Much less is our well being promoted by would-be political royalists," he said, "who, to perpetuate their power, are willing to array class against class in a Nation which has never recognized class."

"We propose," he continued, "to substitute leadership which comes from the people themselves. It will completely administer the Government's business because it knows the meaning of business. It * * * shares the people's knowledge of the value of a dollar. It * * * springs from those who know what it means to be responsible."

He read to the throng a message from Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, Presidential nominee, saying:

"May I add to the warm tribute which you are paying tonight to my friend and fellow worker, Col. Frank Knox. The years of our friendship add for me a meaning to our new relationship. They contribute a confidence and an enthusiasm to the work we shall do together in a common cause. The Republican Party will gain much strength in this campaign from the experience, the vigor and the outstanding ability of Col. Knox."

Outburst of Applause.

Previously, Edward A. Hayes, preconvention campaign manager for Col. Knox, had spoken briefly, asserting that "Republicanism is synonymous with Americanism," and introducing National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, who in turn introduced Senator Steiwer.

Chairman Hamilton predicted "the American people will, on the third day of November, bring to these gentlemen (Landon and Knox) another and vastly more important message—a message that will be a clear and decisive answer to those who would repudiate constitutional government and substitute for it a dictatorial, wasteful bureaucracy, and our people will at the same time advise Gov. Landon and Col. Knox that they have been elected to the highest executive offices in our land."

Col Knox referred to the outstanding bolter of the Democratic Party when he said:

"As Al Smith has expressed it, the American people do not want a dictator, not even if they could get a good one."

"Two ways lie ahead of us," he told the crowd in the Chicago Stadium and the radio audience.

Chincoteague Island, Va., July 30. The strangest rodeo in all the world took place here today. It was strange for a number of reasons, beginning with the setting—a remote island in the Atlantic, the inhabitants of which spend 364 days in the year thinking about the price of oysters, crabs and fish.

But on this day the thought was all of Chincoteague's wild Spanish ponies. The fishermen and the clam diggers knocked off work, and so did the farmers from back in the tomato and cantaloupe country on the mainland. There were visitors also from Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

A truck driver from Trenton came down to see if the wild ponies were really wild. His curiosity was so keen—and the $10 prize so alluring

Roosevelt Visits 'Quoddy Town On Quebec Trip

President Due to Arrive in Canadian Metropolis This Morning.

By the Associated Press.

Eastport, Me., July 30.—President Roosevelt turned toward Quebec late today for a conference on American problems after a personal appearance on the eastern shore of Maine.

Announcing a change in plans in midafternon, the President, accompanied by his mother and Col. Philip B. Fleming, in charge of the abandoned Passamaquoddy Tidal Power Project, left his Campobello Island summer home by motor and ferried over to Luebec, Me.

Riding in a closed sedan the President went on to 'Quoddy Village, where he inspected a model of the tide-harnessing project.

He told scores of citizens grouped about his car:

"I hope when I get back next year it ('Quoddy) will be going."

Another large crowd saw him arrive at the Eastport wharf to board the yacht Potomac for the hour's run to St. Andrews, New Brunswick. He left shortly after 6 p. m., Eastern daylight time.

James Roosevelt, eldest son, and his wife; military and naval aids and two secretaries were to accompany him to Quebec. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Campobello today by motor for Hyde Park.

One of the subjects the President will take up in his talks with the Democratic Aid Selected to Edit Paper in Maine

Norman W. Baxter to Head Portland News as State Election Approaches.

So eager, apparently, is the Democratic national committee to win the September 14 general election in Maine, the first in the country, that it has placed a member of its publicity staff in charge of the news and editorial departments of a Portland newspaper that, it was reported here yesterday, will be virtually the New Deal spokesman in the Pine Tree State.

Baxter Is Director.

Norman W. Baxter, member of the committee staff and formerly chief public relations officer of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was revealed, has become editorial director of the Portland Evening News. It was also reported that new funds have been made available for operation of the paper.

Joined Staff Here.

Baxter was given the position upon recommendation of the Democratic committee after Phillip Chapman, president of the Maine Publishing Co., which publishes the paper, had told of plans to revive the publication, once suspended for several days last spring. The impression was created here that the committee had been influential in interesting new capital in the venture.

Baxter for several years was man-

Transocean Caller of Diplomats Gets Warning From Uncle Sam

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, July 30.—Abe Pickus, who talked of international peace to foreign diplomats by long-distance telephone, today said the United States district attorney cautioned him against reference to United States treaties or policies in his conversations regarding world amity.

Pickus claimed his World War experience as a doughboy in France caused him to telephone Hirosi Saito, Japanese Ambassador; Alexander Troyanovsky, Russian Ambassador, and Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary.

"I talked to the ambassadors personally, but I got only Capt. Eden's

Landon Backs Labor's Right To Organize

Drives in Unorganized Industries Are Said to Merit Protection.

Nominee Recognizes Use of Union Organizers, He Tells Thomas.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 30.—Gov. Alf M. Landon told a Presidential opponent in a letter made public today "public authorities" should protect the right of labor unions to "to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry."

This right of union organization, he said, "includes the right to send in an organizer."

He replied to Thomas' request for elaboration of Landon's acceptance speech statement that the freedom "from interference" pledged organizing employes by the Republican platform "means, as I read it, entire freedom from coercion or intimidation by the employer, any fellow employe or any other person."

Thomas had written under date of July 24, saying that "employers' organizations like the National Manufacturers Association" had used the freedom-from-interference phrase "to mean denial of the right of a labor union, or labor unions" to promote organization of an unorganized industry.

Asked Interpretation.

"Is this the interpretation to be given your words?" Thomas asked.

"In my statement which you quote," Landon replied in his letter dated July 29, "there is nothing to suggest that I am in favor of infringing [illegible] way the right of free speech or free assembly. I am opposed to any such infringement.

"The workers have the right to meet, among themselves or with others of their own choice to promote organization, with complete freedom from interference from anyone whatsoever. The workers should be fully protected in this right by the public authorities.

"This necessarily includes the right of a labor union to promote by lawful and proper means the organization of an unorganized industry, which includes the right to send in an organizer."

In New York, Thomas, commenting late today on Landon's letter, said "it would seem Gov. Landon has recognized as legitimate the activities of the Committee on Industrial Organization and of the Southern Tenant Farmers Association."

The "serious labor disturbance" referred to by Landon was a lead and zinc mine and smelting strike in June and July, 1935. It covered sections of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Barred Imported Gunmen.

"I acceded to a request, jointly preferred by the sheriff and prosecuting attorney of Cherokee County that I send troops to maintain order," Landon said. "I instructed the troops, through the adjutant general of Kansas to maintain order, to disarm all armed civilians, in-

Official of Senate 'Taken for a Ride' By U. S. Marshals

James J. Dunn, assistant custodian of the United States Senate, was "taken for a ride" yesterday by United States marshals serving a writ of attachment on his car.

It was a case of "seize my car, seize me," for Dunn. He was at the Capitol when Deputies J. T. Mattingly and Joseph Doherty arrived to attach the car on a judgment of $408 obtained in the Municipal Court by the Wardman Park Hotel.

Dunn, irate, refused to budge from the vehicle. A Capitol policeman came to his assistance. Then Chief Deputy United States Marshal Thomas Ott appeared and ordered the towing truck into action.

When Dunn still woldn't leave the machine, both he and his car were towed away. The marshals said Dunn rode all the way to the storage garage on Champlain street northwest.

Clevenger Evidence Sent Here for Study

A quantity of secret evidence which may lead to the slayer of 18-year-old Helen Clevenger, New York University honor student, in her room at the Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, N. C., two weeks ago, was being examined in the crime laboratory of the Department of Justice yesterday.

The materials found in the room where the girl was assaulted and shot to death were brought to Washington yesterday.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, declined to discuss the evidence.

It was learned here last night that W. H. Wheelwright, a Federal bank examiner, who lives in the 2000 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest, had made a special trip to Asheville Sunday at the request of Sheriff Laurence Brown, but that he had been unable to shed any light on the case. He was a guest on July 16, when the girl was slain.

2,000 Leftists Reported Slain By Insurgents Near Zaragoza; France May Aid Loyal Armies

Cities of Gulf Await Impact Of Hurricane

Storm to Strike Between Middle Florida, Mobile; Is Moving Slowly.

By the Associated Press.

Pensacola, Fla., July 30.—Hurricane warnings blinked through rain squalls along the extreme western Florida and eastern Alabama Gulf Coast tonight.

A tropical storm slowly whirled its way northwestward through the Gulf of Mexico, kicking up unusually high tides and fanning the west Florida coastline with winds which reached momentary gusts of 50 miles an hour.

Warnings issued yesterday, when the storm first entered the gulf after cutting across extreme southern Florida, sent all ships to cover. This deprived the Weather Bureau of the usual reports from vessels in the storm's path and caused observers to say they were uncertain where and when the disturbance would touch land once more.

To Strike Tonight.

However, the Weather Bureau's late afternoon advisory said the storm probably would strike the northern Gulf Coast somewhere between Apalachicola, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., sometime tonight. It warned of hurricane winds near the center of the storm and of dangerous high tides all along the coastline.

Hurricane warnings, flown from Cedar Keys to Pensacola along the Florida Gulf Coast during the day, were extended westward from here to Mobile late this afternoon. Storm warnings were continued up from Mobile to the mouth of the Mississippi River and from Cedar Keys to Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Rain squalls, blustery winds and falling barometers were reported all along the coast during the afternoon. The tide at Apalachicola, exposed port and oyster fishing town, swept through the streets for blocks around the waterfront and overflowed the Apalachicola River through miles of marshlands.

Water-fronts property and shipping were prepared for the storm. The naval air station here quartered more than 200 planes in safe hangers. Fort Barracks, on the mainland, boarded up for the blow and Fort Pickens, at the entrance to the harbor, was evacuated.

Waterspouts to Hit Conneaut.

Conneaut, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—Two towering waterspouts, lashing wildly from side to side, raced shoreward from Lake Erie today, caused slight property damage and endangered many of Conneaut's 10,000 citizens.

Veteran lake men said the first extended "3,000 or 4,000 feet in the air" and the second "well over 1,000 feet." An interval of an hour separated them.

One took a circular 2-mile route over the land, the other spent itself in a lakeside park. The first ripped a porch off one home, demolished chicken coops and sheds and shattered the windows of a score of houses.

It hovered for nearly 20 minutes over the city, twisting and whirling like a dervish, one observer said.

District to Impound Autos Left Parked Illegally at Night

If you park illegally after 6 p. m. you had better stop the practice. For Maj. Ernest W. Brown issued an order yesterday that the impounding crane will be operated 24 hours a day starting August 2.

Maj. Brown said that often during the night when there is a serious accident or a stolen automobile is found abandoned there is no way to remove the car.

He also warned motorists who are in the habit of parking so as to obstruct traffic at night that their cars will be hauled to the nearest precinct station.

Nunoca Reported Found Off Yucatan

Vera Cruz, Mexico, July 30 (AP).—A radio message received tonight from the port captain at Progreso, Yucatan, said the United States Coast Guard vessel C. G. MacLane had found the English ship Nunoca, missing since July 4.

The report said the C. G. MacLane was towing the Nunoca to Progreso. It gave no further details.

On Wednesday the Coast Guard at Jacksonville, Fla., ordered two cutters to investigate a report from the port captain of Vera Cruz that the Nunoca was lying damaged in the Gulf of Mexico west of the Yucatan peninsula.

The cutters Yeaton and Vigilant, which had been participating in the hunt for the Nunoca since it was lost after leaving Cayman Island, in the West Indies, were sent to that section.

Their Marriage Revealed

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS D. SCHALL.

Widow of Maj. Coupal Is Wed To Son of Late Senator Schall

The marriage of Mrs. Martha Lillian Coupal, widow of Maj. J. F. Coupal, White House physician during the Coolidge Administration, to Thomas D. Schall, jr., 26, son of the late blind Senator from Minnesota, was brought to light yesterday.

Peculiarly enough, the extemporaneous announcement was a by-product of an auction sale at which the 7-acre estate of the former Senator, located at Berwyn Heights, Md., was offered for sale.

The bride, who met young Schall several years ago while he was being treated by Maj. Coupal for injuries received in an auto accident, said she and "Doug" were married July 18 by a justice of the peace in Carmody, Vt.

"No," declared the blonde bride, "it was not an elopement. Both families knew about it. We intended making a formal announcement, but have delayed until things could become more settled."

The "discovery" of the wedding was made by newspapermen when the auctioneer, J. C. Bowden, made reference to "Mrs. Schall, jr."

Daughter of wealthy Edward Wilfert, Boston business executive, the young Mrs. Schall was graduated from the Boston Normal School shortly before the World War. Later she taught in the graded schools of that city.

In 1918 she became the bride of Maj. Coupal, who at that time was preparing to leave for France to take charge of the Twenty-sixth Division Field Hospital.

When, in 1924, he was named to succeed Brig. Gen. Sawyer as White House physician under the Coolidge regime, Maj. and Mrs. Coupal came to live in Washington.

It was in 1930 that "Doug" Schall, then a midshipman at the Naval

$1,726,000,000 In Bonus Paid; Effect in Doubt

Trade, Deposits Unaffected, Officials Are Baffled; Many Retain Bonds.

By Robert C. Albright.

In one of the most amazing financial transactions on record, Uncle Sam has paid out $1,726,482,950 in bonus bonds to veterans, redeemed $1,096,515,700 of them with cash, and disbursed $77,971,891 in jingling odd amounts of less than $50.

And still he doesn't know what has become of the money. The payment has not been reflected to any appreciable extent in retail trade. The banks report that not nearly as much has come back to them in deposits as the Treasury expected. And yet there is a lingering suspicion that the cash is not still burning holes in veterans' pockets.

Out of 3,518,191 eligible veterans, 3,301,990 have applied for their bonds and received them, leaving only 216,201 who have been too modest or have simply forgotten to ask. A thousand or so bonds involving legal complications still are tied up in the Treasury.

With this gigantic transaction virtually completed, the Treasury yesterday estimated it will involve an ultimate payment to veterans of

Pershing Fraud Suspect Lodged In District Jail

Alfred M. Layton, who jumped a $10,000 bond in 1934 after a Federal grand jury had indicted him on charges of using the United States mails fraudulently in the widely publicized Gen. Pershing portrait-bust promotion, was in the custody of the United States marshal's office last night.

The accused promoter was hurried here by automobile yesterday after police apprehended him Wednesday night in Atlantic City, N. J. This time he is held under a $50,000 bond.

Layton's arrest climaxed a search of two and a half years in which Department of Justice agents and police throughout the country cooperated. His case had gained Nation-wide attention because of the charges that many of the country's leading financiers and business men had been victimized by his scheme.

These men had contributed, according to the Government, a total of $11,000 for the purchase of a fine bust of Gen. John J. Pershing, to be presented to the Nation in tribute to the World War general.

Mary Astor, Sobbing on Stand, Says Husband Tortured Child

By the Associated Press.

Miss Astor testified in her trial for custody of the child, 4-year-old Marylyn.

Referring to the period from April 12, 1935, until the following October, when Marylyn was with her mother following her husband's divorce, Roland Rich Woolley, counsel for Miss Astor, asked:

"Did he ever try to discipline the child?"

"Frequently," replied Miss Astor. "He was always talking to her and jerking her to her feet roughly. It seemed there was practically always something wrong."

"How did he discipline her?"

Miss Astor burst into tears and said:

"He'd shake her so hard that her teeth rattled and cut her lips. Then he'd spank her and there would be bruise marks on her little body."

Country's Envoys In 3 Nations Quit

The Spanish Revolt.

Two thousand Loyalist troops were reported slain last night in a surprise rebel attack in the mountains 20 miles outside Zaragoza, insurgent stronghold. The rebels waylaid a government force of about 6,000. The survivors fled.

At Madrid the Leftists took over the merchant marine and enlisted shop girls in a desperate move to stem the rebellion. Fighting continued in the mountain passes guarding the capital.

The rebel radio station at Seville, it was reported, claimed in broadcast that the Madrid government had asked Gen. Francisco Franco for a truce to negotiate the surrender of Madrid.

At Paris there were indications France may supply arms to the Spanish Loyalists because of fear of a new dictatorship.

Three planes in a squadron of six Italian bombers were forced down in French Morocco. Three airmen were killed. The air fleet reportedly was on a 'mission' to rebel headquarters in Spanish Morocco.

By the United Press.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish Frontier, July 30.—Rebel machine gunners ambushed a column of Popular Front militia and killed 2,000 in a narrow canyon north of Zaragoza, according to reports trickling over the border today.

It was reported also that Barcelona is on the verge of a civil war within a civil war with Catalon government forces 25,000 strong massing to fight defiant Communists, anarchists and Socialists who have proclaimed a Soviet regime.

The Barcelona situation was reported so tense that British and American authorities have urged all their nationals to leave at once.

Plan to Pillage Homes.

A fearful battle wholly independent of the general civil war in Spain reportedly impended in Barcelona because the avowed Reds have occupied most of the city's factories and announced their intention of pillaging homes and shops of the rich.

Reports of the massacre near Zaragoza declared that after a four days' forced march from Barcelona the Catalon Loyalists approached within 20 miles of Zaragoza, where the insurgent Gen. Caballero waited with machine guns in mountain defiles hanging over the deep canyon through which the militia had to pass.

With his positions studded with machine guns the rebel commander attacked at down while the Catalons were resting.

Travel in Three Columns.

The estimate of 2,000 dead was based on the fact that the Catalons were traveling in three columns totaling 6,000 men. One was reported annihilated. This was expected further to delay Loyalist attempts to take Zaragoza, major rebel stronghold, by force.

Reports of the situation in Barcelona said the autonomous government under Louis Companys, president of the Catalonian Generalalidad, has mustered 25,000 police, loyal soldiers, civic guards and assault guards to make war on the Communist extremists and anarchists who have precipitated a reign of terror and confiscation.
